He was the best at describing family values and home comfort. However, this was present only on paper, he was able to compose fantasies that adorned human life. He himself had grown up in abject poverty and endless debt, into which their family had been driven by their father.

Charles became very popular in his time, but never really happy. He searched everywhere for his ideal, spending many years of his life on it. His works were included in the classics of world literature.

In 1836, Dickens published his first works under the title «Sketches of Boz». Their topic was very relevant not only for the reporter himself , but also for the majority of residents of the British capital.
