

Prepositions

revision

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- I felt very ashamed of making such a stupid mistake.
- It took him ages to get accustomed to the life in a big city.
- This computer is capable of producing sophisticated graphics.
- Paris is famous for Eiffel Tower.
- She seemed relaxed at the party, even though she was totally aware of so many people staring at her.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- It is always better to eat food that is typical of the region you live in.
- Only you are responsible for your education.
- Everybody was present at the lesson, except Rodi, who was absent from school for more than a week.
- German is similar to English, as they are from the same family of languages.
- The jury found him guilty of arson.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- They are never satisfied with their salary, so they complain all the time.
- It seemed absolutely bizarre to hear the same excuse over and over again, so the teacher got suspicious of the students.
- The flat owners were opposed to building a shopping mall at the premises.
- “Sorry, I can’t lend you anything. I am short on cash myself.”
- Insisting on doing it her way, she left the room enraged.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- I am terrible at math.
- It was almost impossible to escape from the avalanche, so the mountaineers had to hide in the cave.
- This phone differs from the one on the bottom shelf.
- Peter has always dreamt about being a writer, so he eventually made a decision to resign from his mundane office job.
- After a month in the rehab George recovered from his leg injury.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- After a car crash Tony suffers from memory loss.
- The weather in Ohio is so unpredictable, that's why nobody relies on the weather forecast.
- Kathie specializes in nuclear physics.
- This exam consists of five parts.
- He was to blame for all the mess that the company was in at that time.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- Everybody objected to having extra homework.
- According to some scientists, finding a cure for cancer isn't feasible in the nearest future, but patients hope for the best anyway.
- Masha still believes in Santa Claus, even though she is 32.
- Nobody would have ever thought that Richard would succeed in business.
- “Don't be so rude to your brother”, said mom.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- Waiting for three hours at the post office, Tom was fed up with the way things are done in Russia.
- The whole school was astonished at/by the news of Bob being accepted to Harvard.
- Dora is hopeless at finding her way in new places.
- My mom is fond of cats.
- Red Square is crowded with tourists at any time.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- “How can you account for your absence at school?”
- Witnesses accused the wrong guy of stealing.
- Their parents don't always agree on the way they want to raise them.
- Somebody should answer for the broken window.
- His dad doesn't approve of his choice of career.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- To apply for a job, you need a CV.
- Suzie arrived at the airport three hours prior to her flight.
- It's been four hours since I started working on my project, at this point I absolutely have to ask for help if I want to finish it today.
- We ran out of milk, so I have to buy it later.
- The thief broke into the house at night.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- Call me at +7-919-000-00-00.
- Sarah broke up with her boyfriend right before his Birthday.
- It's better to change rubles for dollars before you go to the USA.
- Yesterday when I was walking in the park I ran into my old friend.
- I came across a new word when I was reading this book.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- Changing into slippers is mandatory in my parents' house.
- The president commented on the present situation in the country.
- 'To chip in' means to contribute money or help to something.
- A friend is someone you can count on in any situation.
- The train departs for Tula in 10 minutes.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- Dropping out of university turned out to be a smart decision for Bill Gates.
- You aren't allowed to drive at such high speed in the pedestrian area.
- The kitchen is equipped with all the necessary appliances.
- "Please forgive me for being so hard on you these days."
- Ralf got over the breakup surprisingly quickly.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- After graduating from a local university Dima made a decision to move to a different city.
- Jimmy wasn't attending lessons and as a result he was lagging behind the other students.
- Smoking leads to all the necessary various problems with health.
- Dasha was named after her mom's best friend.
- The boss opened the meeting with a joke, unfortunately nobody got it.

Fill in the gaps with suitable prepositions:

- I prefer coffee to tea.
- Seeing snowy Moscow reminds me of my hometown.
- “Please remind me about the lesson on Friday, because I can easily forget.”
- Vasya regrets spending money on sneakers that don't fit.
- Patty didn't want to go to the party, but her brother managed to talk her into going.