On April 26, 1988, the chemist Valery Legasov, having securely hidden six audio cassettes with his memories, hangs himself in his apartment. April 26, 1986 at 1:23:45 during a safety experiment at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, a reactor explosion and fire occur. Fire alarms without special protection arrive at the scene of the accident, not suspecting that they were at the epicenter of the largest man-made disaster in human history. The leadership of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant assures the Kremlin that the situation is under control and the radiation background is normal, but at the insistence of Academician Legasov, he, along with the deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers Boris Shcherbina, is sent to investigate what is happening on the spot.
