Kazan Arena is the name of a new stadium in Kazan, Russia.

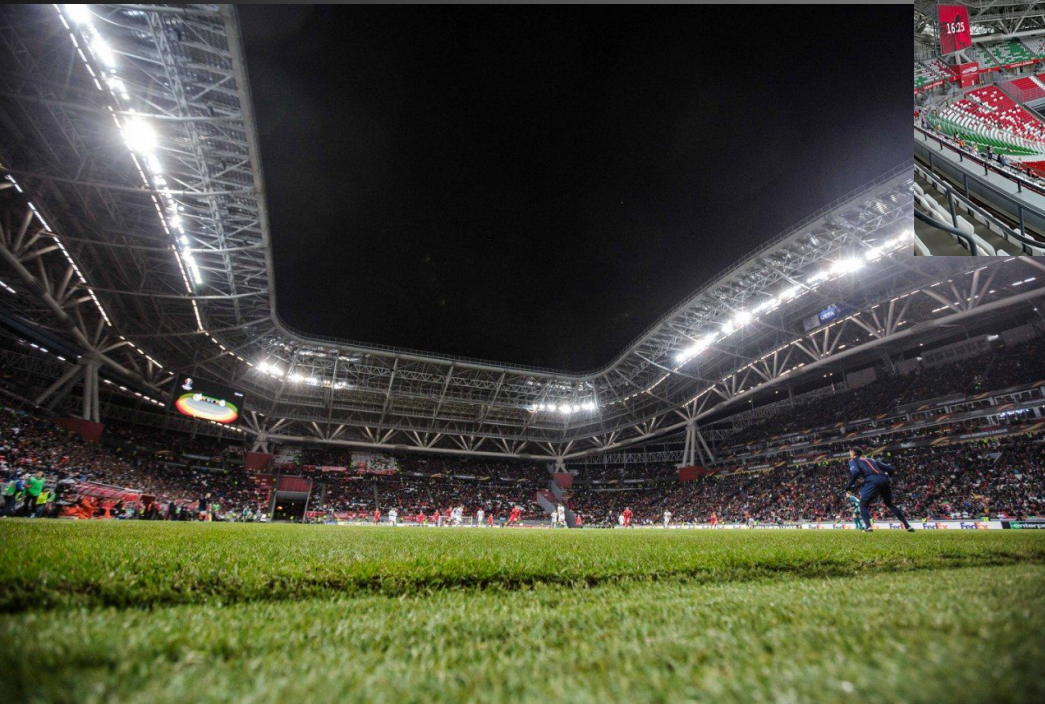

Once completed in 2013 it will host football matches, especially the Russian Premier League side Rubin Kazan's home game

The stadium hosted the 2013 Summer Universiade football competition and will host the 2017 FIFA Confederations Cup and 2018 FIFA World Cup.

It's capacity will be around 45,105. It will replace Central Stadium as Kazan's main football stadium.

The architectural concept has been designed by Populous; according to lead designer Damon Lavelle, the stadium is a unique response to the local culture and place.

The general design stage:

"TatInvestGrazhdanProekt", "Intex",

"TsNIIpromzdany".
