

A scenic landscape of a lake at sunset. The sky is filled with soft, colorful clouds in shades of blue, pink, and orange. The water is calm, reflecting the sky and the surrounding green mountains. On the right side, a small boat is docked near a building, and a tree stands on a small island in the water.

Aspen Mountain

It is difficult to say whether it is better to come to Aspen Mountain in the summer or wait for the winter snow. Skiers flock to Aspen year after year for the mountain's famous slopes, steeps, and glades that challenge even the most experienced skiers – let's not forget that these slopes are challenging enough for World Cup contestants.

During the summers, you can hit one of the dozens of trails, join the yoga group on the mountaintop, take a naturalist tour to learn about the wildlife and plants, or you can enjoy the view from a gondola.

Plitvice Lakes, Croatia

- Plitvice Lakes are a magical world of living, moving water surrounded by ancient forests, 16 lakes linked by waterfalls, bridges natural and man-made, and 300 square kilometers of wild beauty full of bears, wolves, boars, and birds.
- The difference in altitude between 1,280 meters at the highest point and 280 meters at the lowest creates a seemingly endless number of falls, big and small, that permanently fill the air with spray and fog. The lakes are beautiful all year round, but especially when mirroring magical fall colors or the lacy frozen branches of the surrounding trees.

Lake Bled, Slovenia

- If you glimpse Lake Bled in Slovenia from one of the distant mountaintops, you will be convinced that you are seeing some magical, lost fantasy world of dragons and knights: A vivid emerald green lake with a tiny island in the middle with a church perched on its cliff and an ancient medieval castle clinging to its slopes, hugged on all sides by enormous mountains, snow-topped and covered with dark, green, ancient forests.
- Lake Bled is just as beautiful as you get closer and is a popular Slovenian tourist destination that attracts those seeking romance on Bled Island, visitors enjoying a leisurely hike around the lake or rowing its placid waters, and young adventurers exploring the steep hiking trails of the surrounding Julian Alps and the Karavanke Mountains.
