

The Intern

«The Intern» is not about my favorite...

but

This about something makes you think.

Think about our past, present, future.

Think about the older generation.

Think about what your heart wants and what would be better for everyone.

Furthermore, it's really a matter of inspiration.

I was looking for some inspiration for working hard for success, when I happened upon this movie that inspired me to work hard.

We all want to know everything about some of the most successful people in this world. We want to know about their starting and journey and the moment that they realized that this is the success and they have achieved it. There's a thrill in knowing these small things from a successful person's life and nothing can replace it.

The Intern is a 2015 American film directed, written and produced by Nancy Meyers.

Genres: Comedy/Drama

Robert De Niro

Anne Hathaway

Hathaway plays Jules Ostin, a high-powered executive at a new fashion website, and De Niro is Ben, a senior intern hired to work for her after he rejects the idea of retirement.

Anne Jacqueline Hathaway (born November 12, 1982) is an American actress.

The recipient of many awards, including an Academy Award «Primetime Emmy Award», and a Golden Globe, she was one of the highest-paid actresses in the world in 2015. Her films have earned over $6.8 billion worldwide, and she appeared in the Forbes Celebrity 100 list in 2009.

Anne made her breakthrough as the protagonist in her debut film, the Disney comedy The Princess Diaries (2001), The Devil Wears Prada (2006).

p.s.: these films made her my idol.

Robert Anthony De Niro (born August 17, 1943) is an American actor, producer, and director who holds both American and Italian citizenship. He is particularly known for his collaborations with filmmaker Martin Scorsese. He is the recipient of various accolades, including two Academy Awards Golden Globe Award, the Cecil B. DeMille Award, and a Screen Actors Guild Life Achievement Award. In 2009, he received the Kennedy Center Honor and in 2016, he received a Presidential Medal of Freedom from U.S. President Barack Obama.

Taglines: Experience never gets old.

Many people used to think that stories about pensioners are a crumbling house in the village with yellowed, leaky wallpaper or pigeon gatherings on benches at the entrance.

This film will show that old people can really surprise and inspire.

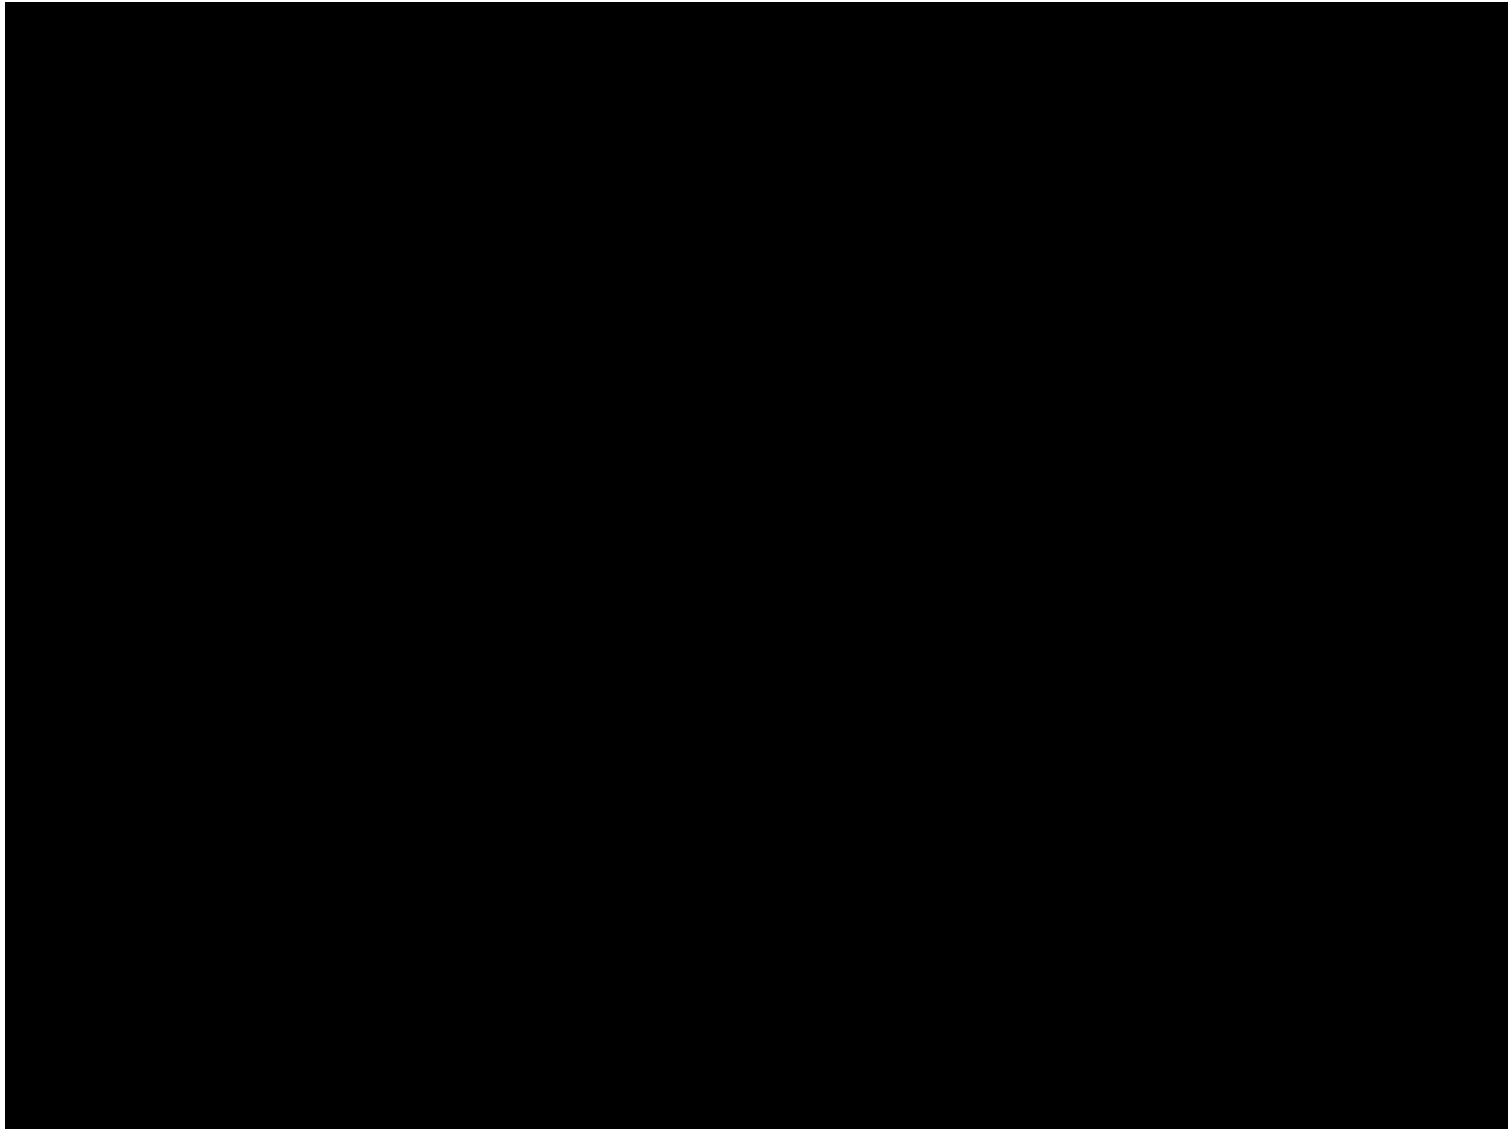

A retired 70-year-old widower, Ben (Robert De Niro), is bored with retired life. He applies to be a senior Intern at an online fashion retailer and gets the position in a team that's young enough to be Ben's grandchild.

The founder of the company is Jules Ostin (Anne Hathaway), a tireless, driven, demanding, dynamic workaholic. She rides a roller scooter right in the workroom to save time.

But Jules believes he has a nominal role - she doesn't intend to give him work and it is just window dressing. However, Ben is going to be quite useful and, more than that, a source of support and wisdom.

Initially frozen out by her, Ben slowly wins over co-workers with his congeniality and gets into Jules's good graces. And becomes something of a father figure to several of the younger workers: by offering advice about issues such as love, clothes sense and work/life balance.

He provides another with a place to stay at his brownstone after his colleague is evicted by his parents.

Ben heads to work one day extra early to organize a messy desk that Jules had complained about previously.

He develops a romantic relationship with the in-house massage therapist, Fiona

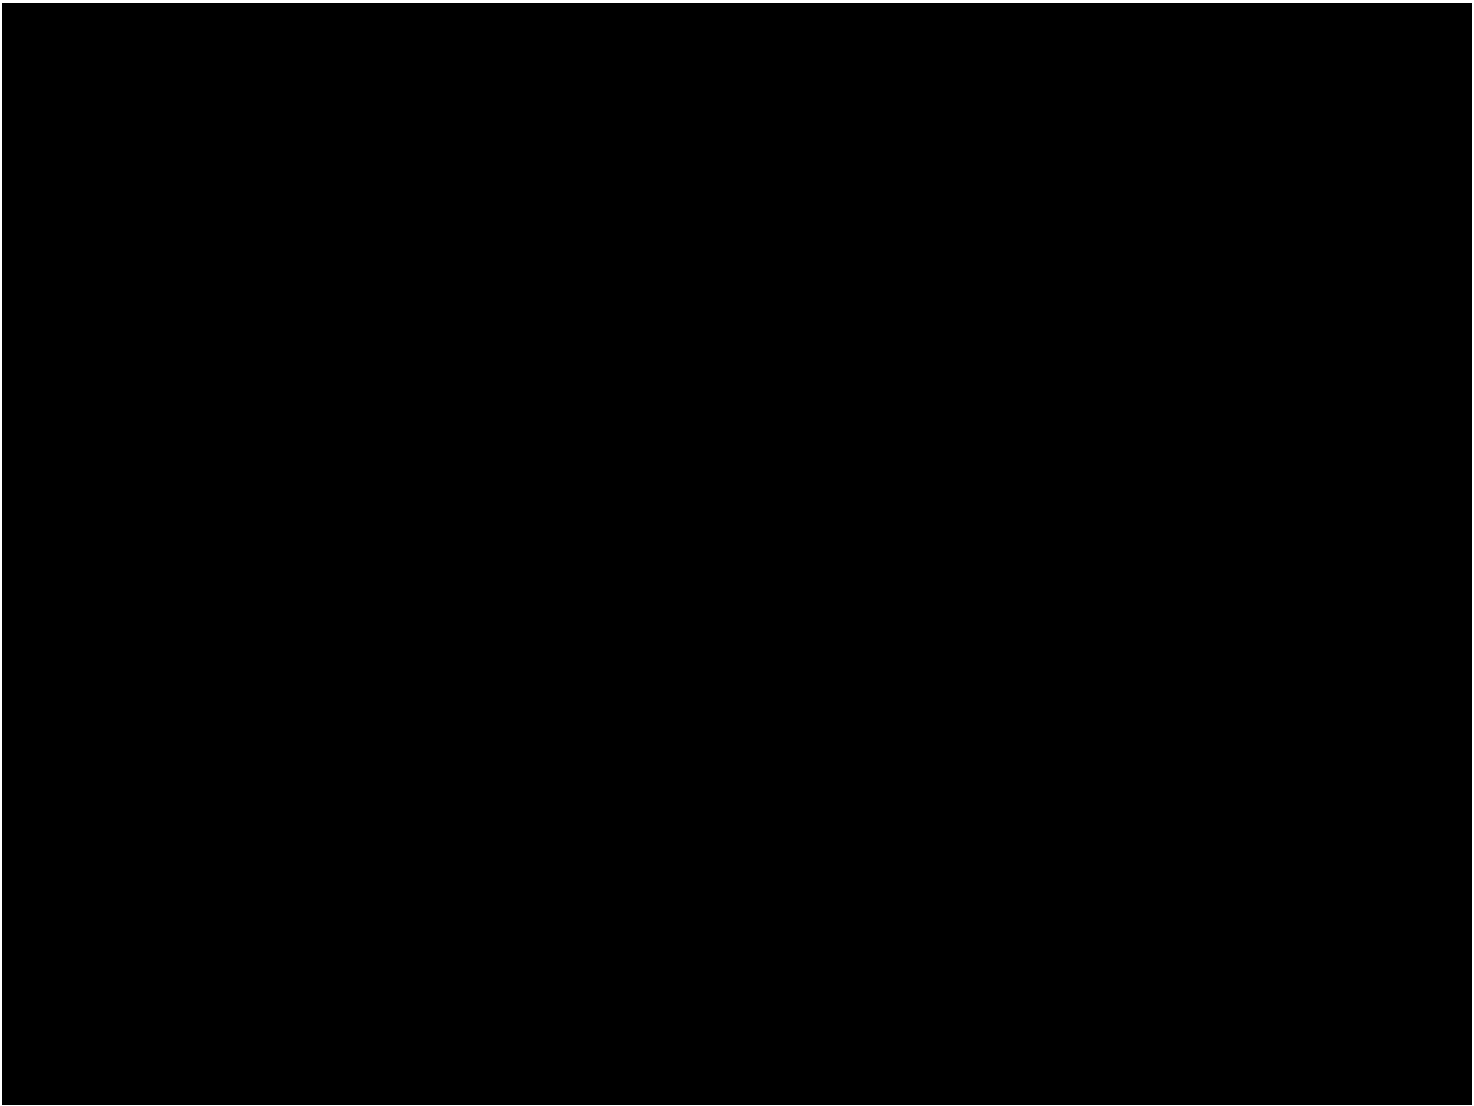

- After work, Ben notices Jules's chauffeur drinking, convinces the driver to leave and drives Jules home himself, a role he retains in days to come.
- Ben eventually reveals that he once worked in the very same building where About The Fit is now based.

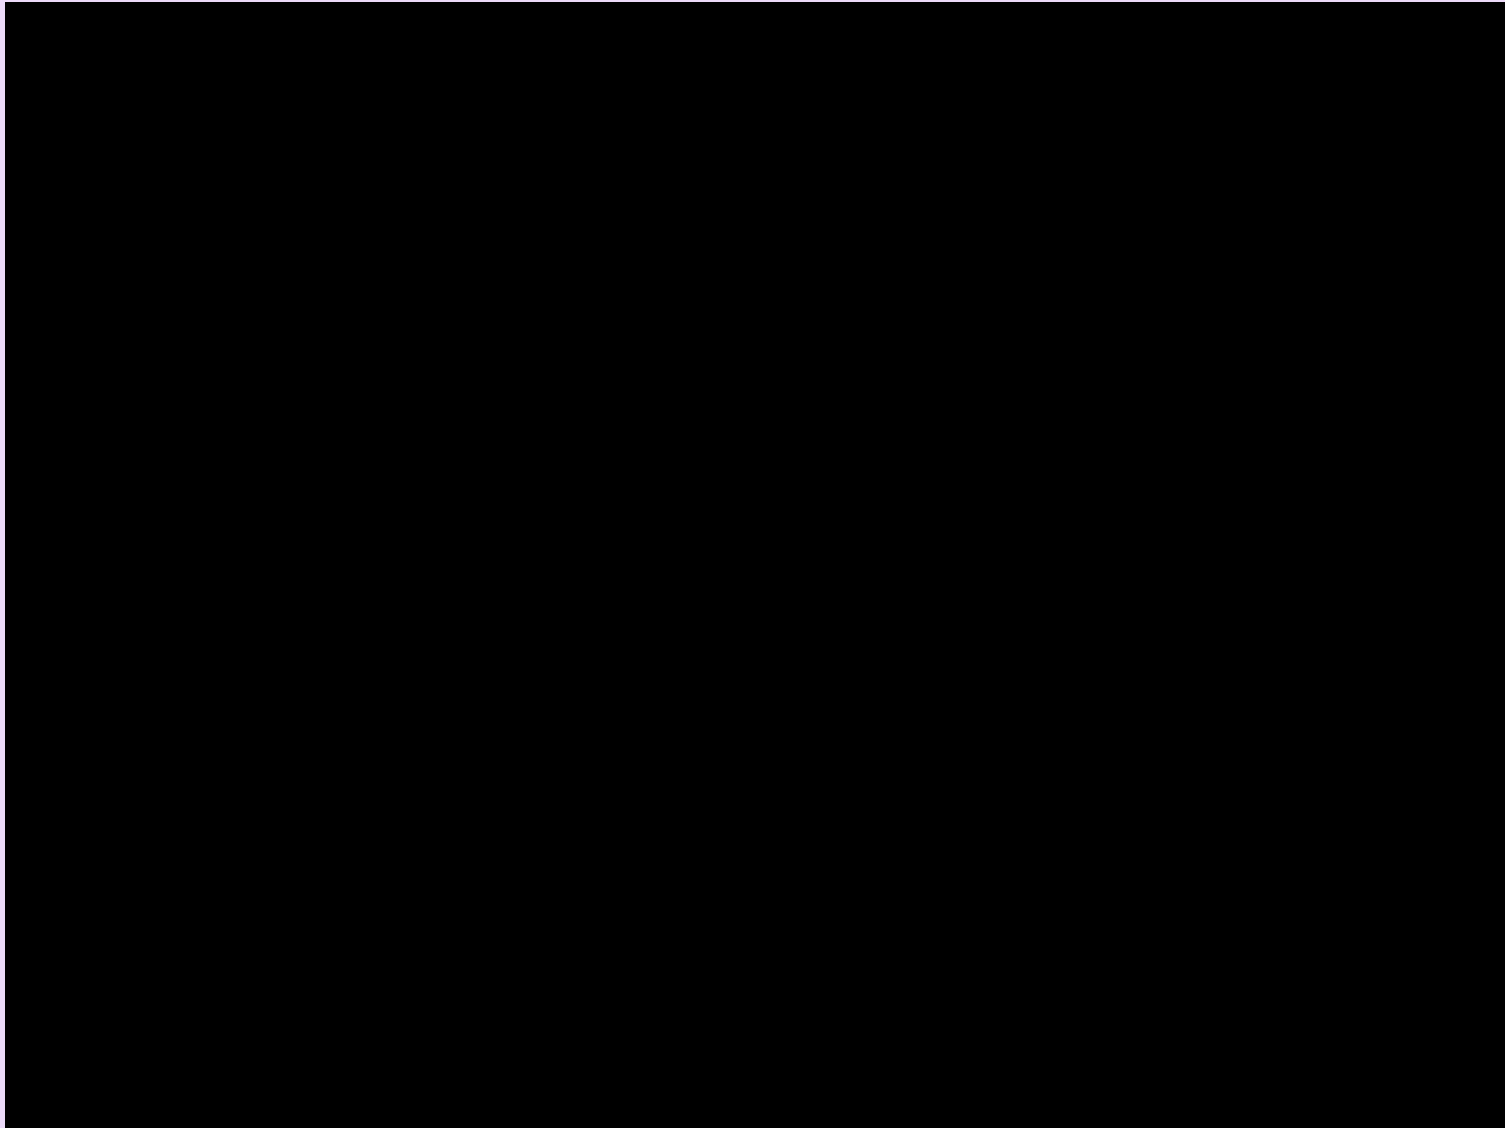

Ben becomes very committed to Jules, and even breaks into the house of Jules' mother to delete an embarrassingly scathing email, narrowly avoiding getting arrested in the process.

Ben also gets to know Jules' family. Her husband, Matt, gave up his own career to be a stay-at-home dad to their daughter, Paige, when About The Fit started to take off.

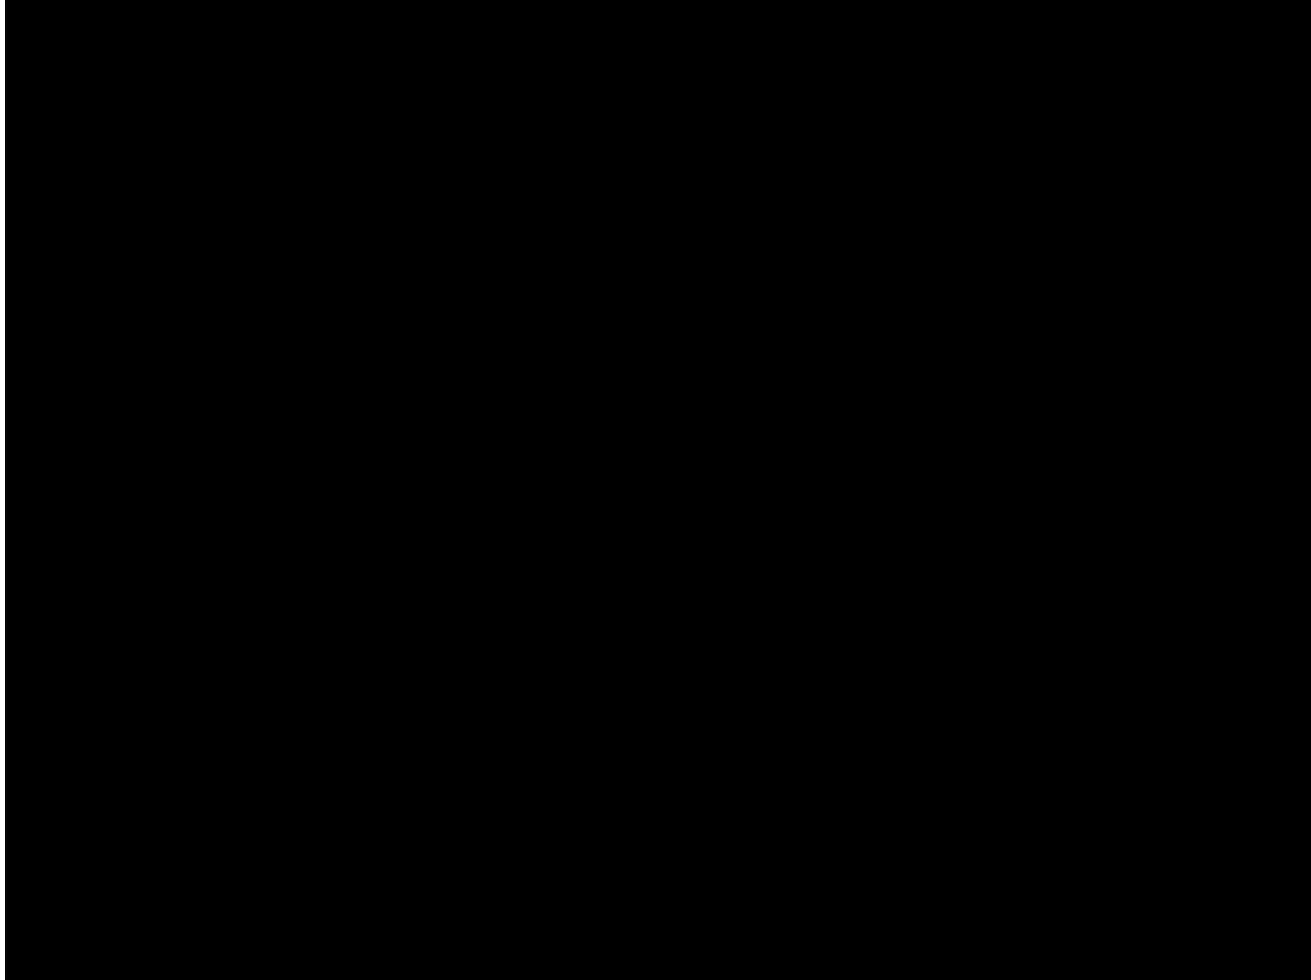

There is no hint of romance between the two characters. It is more of a friendship and professional relationship, which turns out to benefit both of them.

Meanwhile, Jules is under pressure to give up her post of CEO to someone outside of the company as her investors feel that she is unable to cope with the workload, having grown About The Fit from a startup founded in her kitchen to a 220-employee juggernaut in only eighteen months. Believing it will give her more time at home with her family, Jules is willing to consider the proposal.

Once, Ben discovers SOME SECRET about Jules's husband.

The film is incredibly touching and kind: the excitement of a cute grandfather going to work on the first day, aches somewhere inside, and the small failures and difficulties of the character De Niro in getting acquainted with the computer and the Internet will cause a smile to those who at least once helped their grandparents to understand the mobile phone. I think, he is my favorite character here.

The slot simply glows with respect for the wisdom and fortitude of older people who are trying not just to live out their life, but to keep up with it, keep up with their children and grandchildren, and be not only an understanding and tactful teacher for young people, but also their diligent student.

At the same time, the film does not forget to go through such painful topics as women-careerists and men-housewives, dependence on gadgets and inability to communicate in real life.

The brilliant acting Duo of Robert De Niro and Anne Hathaway, sincere and warm humor, endless love of life and family comfort — a great set for home viewing and raising the mood.

So, enjoy the show!
