

Mixed conditionals

Conditional sentences

1st conditional

If clause	conditional clause
If + present tense	future tense

If he misses his train, he'll be late.

2nd conditional

If clause	conditional clause
If + past tense	would + bare infinitive

If my car broke down, would you help me?

3rd conditional

If clause	conditional clause
If + past perfect	would + have + past participle

If I had studied harder, I would have passed the exam.

Mixed conditionals

If I 'd slept well last night, I wouldn't be tired today.

I didn't sleep well last night. I am tired today.

If she was a better driver, she wouldn't have crashed her car.

She isn't a good driver. She crashed her car.

Imaginary past

If I'd slept well last night, I wouldn't be tired today.

Present result

Hypothetical present

If she was a better driver, she wouldn't have crashed her car.

Past result

Language in action

Isla: Guess what! I'm getting a promotion!

Tom: Really? Congratulations! How come?

Isla: The presentation I gave last week. My boss saw it and really liked it.

Tom: Wow! And to think you were really worried about it.

Isla: Well, Sarah was supposed to have done it, but she's been ill. It's been tough, as I've had to do a lot of her work. If she had been ok, I wouldn't be doing half the work I'm being asked to do.

Tom: It sounds like you've made the most of it though. If you weren't so hard working, they'd never have given you the opportunity in the first place.

Isla: Yes, but I think luck has played a part. I got the job because I saw an advert in a newspaper, and I only bought the newspaper because my mobile had run out of battery. If I'd taken my charger with me, I wouldn't be working there now.

Tom: Obviously, Your boss likes you.

Isla: Yes, but he likes to reward his staff. If he didn't, many people would have left, most of his employees have been there for years.

THiNK

GET IT RIGHT!

If she hadn't lived in Spain, she wouldn't be able to speak Spanish.

If he were better at science, he'd have chosen to do it at university.

If we'd caught the bus, we'd be home by now.

Can you remember the rules?

1 If we want to connect a hypothetical (imaginary) past with a present action or situation, the if clause follows the pattern of the third conditional and the consequence clause follows the pattern of the second conditional.

In the past (if clause)	Now (consequence)
3 rd conditional	2 nd conditional
If I had caught the bus,	I would be at school now.
= I didn't catch the bus and I'm not at school yet.

Can you remember the rules?

2 If we want to connect a hypothetical (imaginary) present with a past action or situation, the if clause follows the pattern of a second conditional and the consequence clause follows the pattern of a third conditional.

Now (If clause)	In the past (consequence)
2nd conditional	3rd conditional
If his parents earned more money,	they'd have paid for him to go on the school trip.
= They don't earn more money so they didn't pay for the school trip.

Read and match. How many sentences can you make?

If I had taken up the guitar,	he'd be in serious trouble now.	he wouldn't have been hit by the ball.	If you had hit the ball,
If he had better luck,	she would have known what was going on.	I would be famous.	I'd still be standing in the rain.
your team would be the winners.	I would have gone to the party.	If he had pushed his luck any further,	If she turned up more often,
she would have asked the way.	If you hadn't pulled up in your car,	If she spoke Italian,	If I didn't have so much work,

THiNK

Make mixed conditional sentences about the picture.

Acknowledgements

The authors and publishers acknowledge the following sources of copyright material and are grateful for the permissions granted. While every effort has been made, it has not always been possible to identify the sources of all the material used, or to trace all copyright holders. If any omissions are brought to our notice, we will be happy to include the appropriate acknowledgements on reprinting and in the next update to the digital edition, as applicable.

The publishers are grateful to the following for permission to reproduce copyright photographs and material: © Chris Clor/Blend Images/Getty Images.

Written by Emma Szlachta.