Kidnapping Caucasian Style (Shurik's New Adventures)” is the famous Soviet romantic comedy directed by the outstanding movie director Leonid Gaidai.

One of the scenes from this film was shot in the Caucasus, not far from Krasnaya Polyana.

The scene of Shurik's and Nina's swimming in the river was shot in mountain river Mzymta, which flows to the Black Sea in Adler.

The movie tells a story of a naive student Shurik who comes to the Caucasus to learn local traditions, Shurik falls in love with a beautiful student Nina.

Comrade Saahov decides to marry Nina and agrees with her uncle

They decide about her kidnapping, and it must be performed by pretty thieves Trus, Balbes and Byvalyi. But Nina is always with Shura.

Then some crooks persuade Shurik that Nina has already engaged to another man and, according to the ancient tradition, she should be kidnapped by the groom.

At this time, in the Saahov`s chalet kidnappers locked Nina in the room, surrounded her, however, with all the comforts

Comrade Saahov is making an attempt to introduce with the "bride" and left the room, bathed in wine.

Only later Shurik realizes that he has inadvertently become a part of the plot to force Nina to wed a corrupt local bureaucrat.

He and his friend are sent to the chalet under the guise of doctors, Shura tries to help Nina, but she runs away.

It begins the chase, which resulted Trus, Balbes and Byvalyi catching up Nina, but they are fall sleep.

Having caught up the car, Shurik rescues Nina

In the final episode Shurik accompanies Nina following for her on his donkey.

Sorry to say, the most part of the film was shot in the Crimea.
Thank you for attention!
