African penguin

A close-up photograph of two African penguins standing on a sandy beach. The penguins have black heads and necks with white chests and bellies. They have a distinctive white patch on their foreheads and a black band around their necks. The background is a blurred, rocky or sandy terrain.

They live in Namibia and South Africa their height is only 60cm and there are a total of 27 colonies and they are listed in the red book

Commercial fishing prohibited on the shores of Namibia and South Africa to increase the penguin population and they haven't natural enemies it's a penguin paradise

Black spots on the penguin's chest are unique as human fingerprints and they are good swimmers on average penguins dive more than on 30 meters deep and swim on average more than 20 km/h and even more can swim more than 70 kilometers a day

Couple

Penguins to starts a family couple in mating season and live together for more than 2 years or until the end of life, hatch eggs in turn

The yolk of their eggs is an unusual blue

They do everything together swim together, hunt together and everything else mostly. They eat small fish and shellfish

They children leave the colony after growing up and go on a trip. Teens from the shores of Namibia sail to South Africa and teens from the shores of South Africa to Namibia. Their journey lasts exactly a year, after they return to their native lands. And so it goes on endlessly
