

UNICEF

United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund

UNICEF is an international organization operating under the auspices of the United Nations.

UNICEF is the successor to The International Children's Fund (ICEF), established in 1946 by the United Nations.

UNICEF is supported by contributions from Governments and private donors. Its total revenue as of 2018 was $5.2 billion, of which two-thirds came from governments;

The rest was contributed by private groups and individuals through national committees.

UNICEF programmes focus on the development of community-based services to promote the health and well-being of children.

UNICEF has been recognized for its work, including the Nobel Peace Prize in 1965, the Indira Gandhi Prize in 1989 and the Princess of Asturias Prize in 2006.

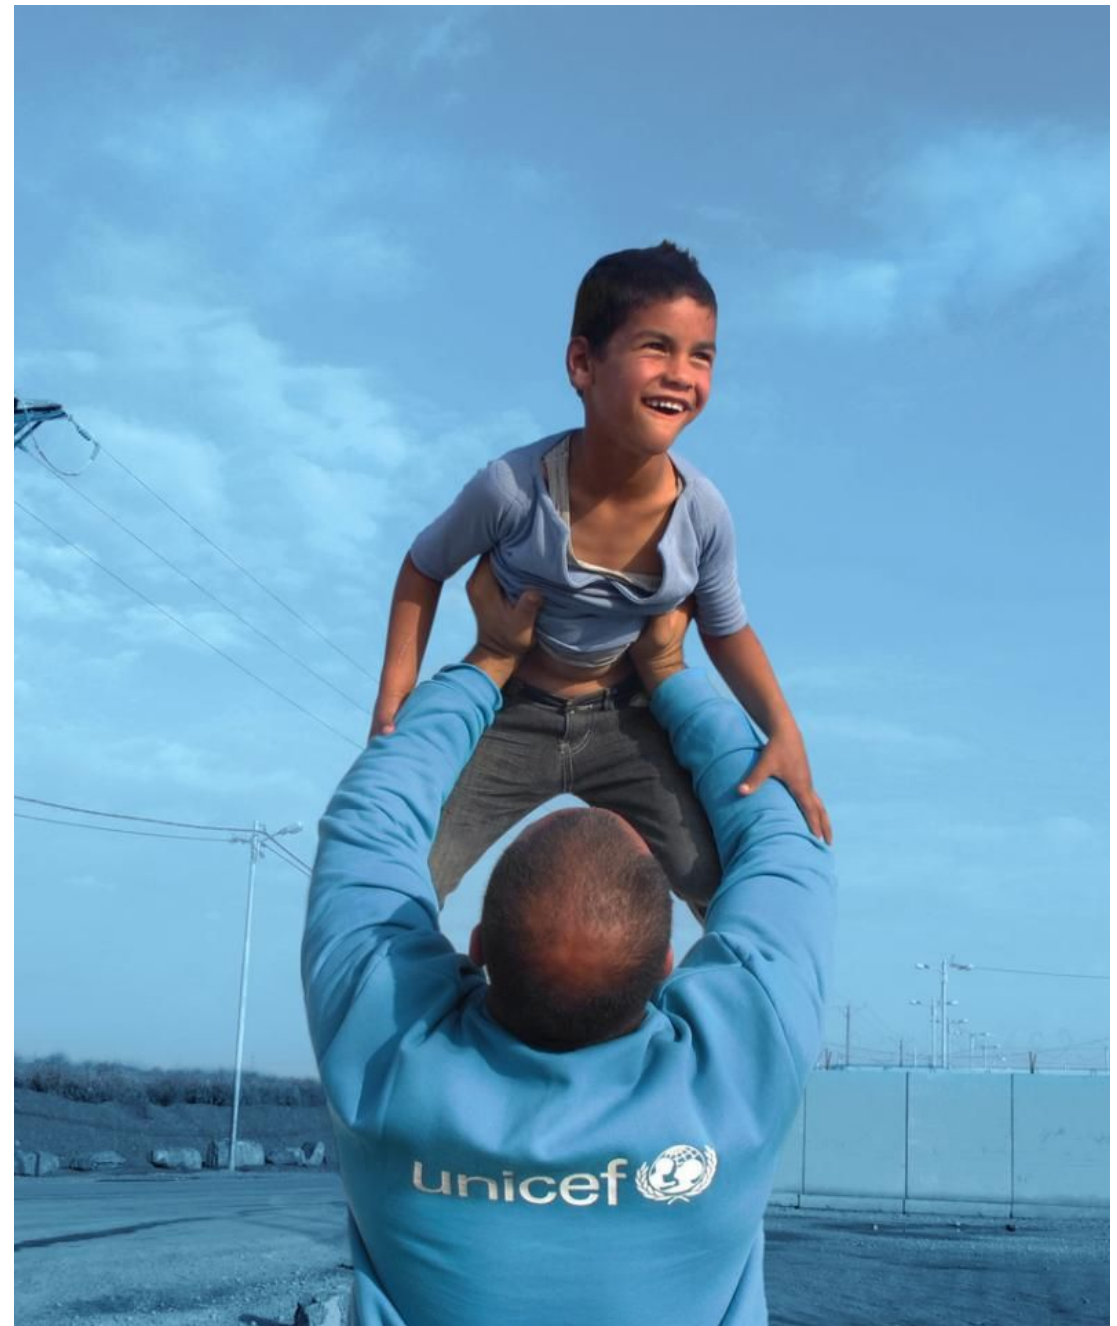

Most UNICEF work is done on the ground in 192 countries and territories.

The UNICEF network of more than 150 offices, headquarters and other offices in various countries, as well as 34 National Committees, carries out the mission of UNICEF through programmes developed jointly with host Governments.

UNICEF Supply Division is located in Copenhagen and serves as the main distribution point for important items such as the provision of vaccines, antiretroviral drugs for children and mothers with HIV, nutritional supplements, emergency shelters, family reunification assistance and the purchase of educational materials.

A close-up photograph of a woman with dark hair, wearing a blue t-shirt with the word "unicef" printed on it, hugging a young child from behind. The child is looking down with a serious expression. The background is dark and out of focus. The text "Directions of activity of the organization" is overlaid in white on the left side of the image.

Directions of activity of the organization

Survival of children

- Early development
- Health care
- HIV/AIDS
- Immunization
- Nutrition
- Water, sanitation and hygiene

Protection and integration of children

- Child protection
- Adolescent development
- Migrant and displaced children
- Children with disabilities
- Communication for child development
- Environment and climate change
- Gender equality

Education of children

- Children's education
- Education of children with disabilities
- Early childhood education
- Education in emergencies
- Gender equality in education
- Innovations in education

Emergencies

- UNICEF pays special attention to children and their families who are in an emergency situation to ensure that they are provided with the measures they need to protect, save lives and ensure the rights of all children around the world.

UNICEF in Ukraine

The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) opened its office in Kyiv in 1997. Over the years, UNICEF has supported the Government of Ukraine with nearly US$130 million of aid to develop health, water and sanitation, education and protection programmes for children.

Since the beginning of the conflict in eastern Ukraine, UNICEF works to fulfill the core commitments for children in humanitarian action, including access to education, psychosocial support, water and sanitation, mine risk education, maternal and child health and HIV and AIDS services.

The main goals of the UNICEF country programme (2018-2022) are:

- to contribute to the progressive realization of the rights of all children in Ukraine;
- to reduce equity gaps;
- maintain a balance between humanitarian, recovery and development interventions;
- incorporate conflict-supportive programming; and
- build peace in the framework of on-going key reforms in social sectors and decentralization.

СПАСИБО ЗА ВНИМАНИЕ!

proverka@example.com