WHEN IT WAS INVENTED

ORIGINAL VACUUM CLEANER

- John S. Thurman invented, in 1898, gasoline powered cleaner that was so big that had to be horse-drawn and didn't create a vacuum, but it blew the air and “cleaned” like that. The first vacuum cleaner that used the same principle as those that we use today was invented by Hubert Booth in England in 1901.

ROBOTIC VACUUM CLEANER

- The first ever robotic vacuum cleaner appeared in 1996. It was made by Electrolux, Swedish household and professional appliances manufacturer and was called “Trilobite”.

ADVANTAGES OF ROBOTIC VACUUM CLEANER

- it gets the job done
- operates quietly
- has a cliff sensor to keep it from tumbling down stairs
- it maps out the floor space, and makes sure to avoid any furniture — or it cleans under it if your items are high enough from the floor. so you can monitor
- vacuum cleaner can be easily monitored with your phone
- animal friendly

FEEDBACKS

- “For some people, it might make sense to have multiple vacuums for different situations,” says Frank Rizzi, a senior lab technician who tests vacuums at CR
- “The latest technology. Powerful, deep cleaning for all around your home. Tough, lightweight design” Clara Brown(fashion designer)
- “Compact, powerful cleaning, technology to easily move under furniture and around obstacles.”George Green(newsagent)
