Tigers

Tigers are large predatory cats. They have red hair with black stripes. An interesting fact about them is that they have stripes not only on their fur, but also in their skin. They live in: Malaysia, Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and China.

Pythons

Pythons are large snakes that do not have venom. they are predators, so they hunt. Although they have no poison, they are able to open their mouths very wide, which allows them to swallow prey.

Cheetahs

Cheetahs are big cats with fast running speed. They look like leopards, but they have long and powerful legs. And at the moment they are the fastest of all animals.

Scorpions

Scorpions are one of the most venomous animals. They live in the sands because they like dark places. Their poison is in their tails. At the end of their tails is spike with poison.

Camels

Camels are the most famous animals. People have been using them to travel long distances for a very long time. Camels could not drink for a very long time.

Also, they contain nutrients in their humps, so the camel can be well fed, and without food it will be able to hold out for a particularly long time.

Bears

Brown bears are the “owners of Siberia”. Brown bears, like most bears, go into hibernation. They eat a lot, trying to gain a normal amount of nutrients, and they need to do it before the beginning of winter.

Also, they can walk on two hind legs, or on four paws. If you are not the fastest person in the world, then It will be impossible for you to escape from a bear.

Kangaroos

Kangaroos are marsupials. They can be taller than a person, and they are also much faster. The kangaroo does not see any danger from a person. But if a kangaroo feels danger from a person, then it can attack him. A kangaroo mom can throw away a sick little kangaroo to give birth to a healthy one.

Thank you! :>
