Canada is one of the largest countries in the world, second only to Russia and crowning the North American continent.

Canada is a constitutional monarchy with strong democratic traditions. The Queen of Great Britain is recognized as the head of state and is represented by the Governor-General. All power belongs to the government, headed by the Prime Minister.

The area of Canada is 10 million square kilometers, which makes it the largest country not only on the American continent, but also in the entire Western hemisphere. The population is about 36 million people.

The main trade and economic relations for Canada are relations with the United States, with which it shares the longest unguarded border in the world, cooperates at various levels and for which it is the most important trading partner for the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Canada is one of the world's largest suppliers of agricultural products; Canadian prairies are one of the largest producers of wheat, rapeseed and other grains, and export policy in this area is determined by the Canadian Grain Commission

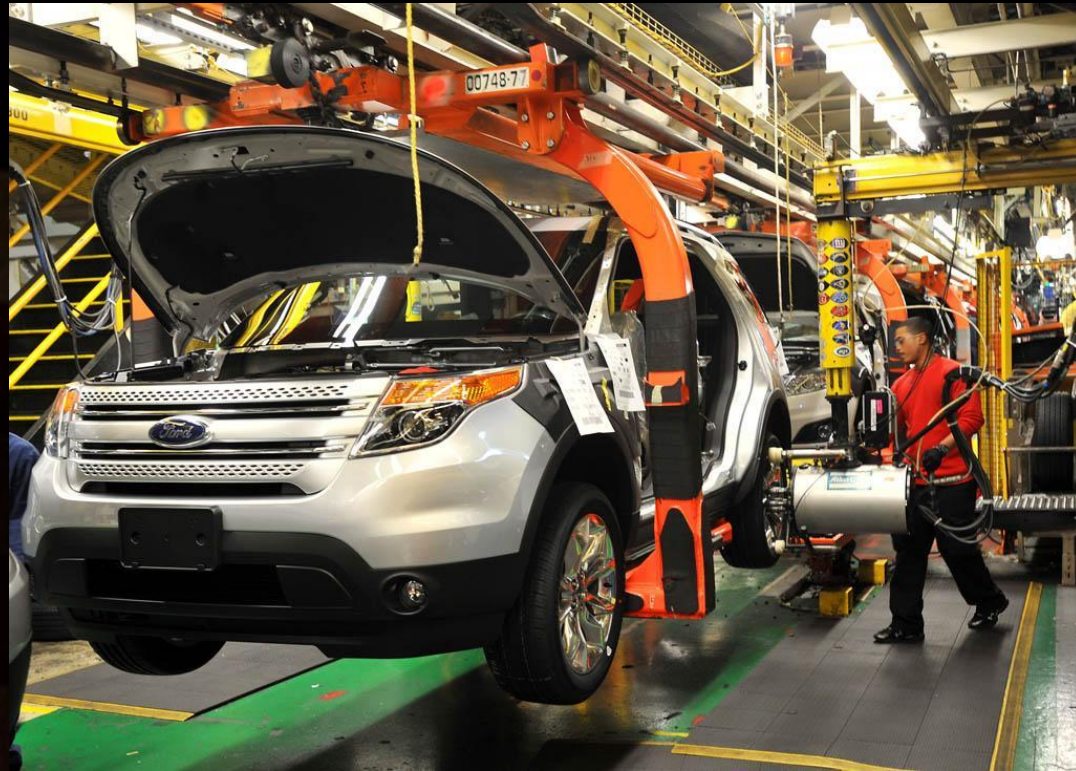

Canada is the largest producer of zinc and uranium and also a source of many other natural resources such as gold, nickel, aluminum and lead. Many cities in northern Canada, where natural conditions impede agriculture, exist thanks to nearby mines or sources of wood.

Manufacturing is also developed in Canada, with industries concentrated in southern Ontario (the automotive industry represented by American and Japanese plants) and Quebec (the national aerospace industry).

Canada is one of the safest countries. Carrying weapons, unlike the United States, is prohibited. Crime rates are typically several times lower than in the United States. According to official police statistics, the crime rate, since 1990, has been steadily declining every 5 years.

Canada is considered safe in terms of road safety. If in neighboring America 10,9 cars account for about 1.98% of fatal accidents, then here this figure does not exceed 1.62%. The country is also bypassed by most natural disasters.
