Vowel

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

A vowel is a speech sound made by the vocal folds (commonly called the vocal cords). It is also a type of letter in the alphabet.

The letters of the English alphabet are either vowels or consonants or both. A vowel sound comes from the lungs, through the vocal cords, and is not blocked, so there is no friction. All English words have vowels.

These letters are vowels in English:

A, E, I, O, U, and sometimes Y can be considered a vowel.

The letter Y can be a vowel (as in the words "cry", "sky", "fly", "my" or "why"), or it can be a consonant (as in "yellow", "yacht", "yam" or "yesterday").

The letter W can sometimes be a vowel when used in a Diphthong such as cow, bow, or how, or it can be a consonant ("when", "where", "wet"). W can be a vowel in a few words that come from Welsh, like "cwm" (a kind of valley).

These five or six letters stand for about 20 vowel sounds in most English accents.^[1] This important fact helps to explain why pronunciation can be difficult for both native speakers and learners of English.

- The rest of the letters of the alphabet are consonants:

B, C, D, F, G, H, J, K, L, M, N, P, Q, R, S, T, V, W, X, Y (sometimes), and Z

Monophthongs and diphthongs [change | change source]

There are a few different kinds of vowels. Simple vowels are called monophthongs, since you only need to place your tongue and mouth in one place. The words in the parentheses are the IPA symbols for each vowel sound.

Common monophthongs in English (these are for General American English) include:

Shall: uses

Offers, suggestions and advice

We use shall I and shall we to make offers and suggestions, and to ask for advice.

offer	Shall I carry your bag? suggestion	Shall I call again on Thursday? seeking advice	What shall we do with this?

Predictions and intentions

We use shall instead of will with I and we in rather formal contexts to make predictions and to talk about intentions or decisions. It is much less common than will.
