Can you remember the rules?

have / has got (positive and negative)

- We use have / has got to talk about possession.

I've got a bicycle. (= There is a bicycle and it is my bicycle.)

He's got a problem. (= There is a problem and it is his problem.)

- We use have got with I/you/we/they. We use has got with he/she/it. In speaking and informal writing, we often use the short forms: 've got / 's got.

I've got a tablet.

My mother's got black hair and blue eyes.

- The negative form is hasn't / haven't got.

This town hasn't got a park.

They haven't got a car.

Can you remember the rules?

have / has got (questions)

We make questions with Has/Have + subject + got. Short answers use has/have or hasn't/haven't. Remember that we don't use contracted forms in positive short answers (e.g. NOT: Yes, ~~I've.~~)

Have you got my book?

Yes, I have.

Has your father got brown hair?

Yes, he has.

Has the shop got any new DVDs?

No, It hasn't.
