

 The teacher of the year contest

Master Class

Roman Kovshik

Would he like something to be changed?

Yes, he would.

He would like to have a son.

Why?

Because if he had a son, he would play a boy toys with him. But, does he have a sun in real?

No, he doesn't

Does he play boy toys with anyone?

No, he doesn't.

And what about this cat?

If this cat were the only cat in the house, it would eat all the food.

And these guys?

They would be basketball players if they were taller and faster.

What do all these sentences have in common?

- If he had a son, he would play a boy toys with him.
- If this cat was the only cat in the house, it would eat all the food.
- They would be a basketball team if they were taller and faster.

They talk about imaginary/unreal situation in the present.

They are second conditional sentences.

How do we make the 2nd conditional?

If clause

Main clause

Past Simple

Would + V₁

- If he had a son, he would play a boy toys with him
- If this cat was the only cat in the house, it would eat all the food
- They would be a basketball team if they were taller and faster.

I wouldn't be afraid
if I were stronger.

You can also use the 2nd conditional to criticize someone.

You would be more healthier if you didn't smoke so much.

You can also use the 2nd conditional to give advice

I would order a pizza if I were you

Now it's time to practice

If the weather _____ fine, we would go for a walk.

- a) had been
- b) were

If she had an umbrella, she _____ wet.

- a) wouldn't get
- b) didn't get

Now it's time to practice

If the animals could talk, I wonder what _____ they _____?

- a) would / say
- b) would/said

If she _____ harder, she would earn more money/

- a) worked
- b) works

And what would you buy if you had a lot of money?

If I had a $1 000 000 , I would ...

And what would you buy if you had a lot of money?

If I had a $1 000 000 , I would ...

And what would you buy if you had a lot of money?

If I had a $1 000 000 , I would ...

THANK YOU FOR ATTENTION