

Hobby in Britain

-
- For a British hobby - not just a hobby, but an opportunity to show your skills in a favorite business. This is the only way to demonstrate your individuality, attract attention to yourself and openly boast of your successes. The British are most likely to talk about what they do at their leisure, and not about family, work, films or television programs.
 - In Britain, people have more fun, hobbies and interests outside everyday business.

Gardening

- The most important occupation of the British is gardening. Regardless of profession, education, social status, age and position in society.
- Gardening for a Briton is more than a hobby, even more than a passion.
- In no other country will you find such well-groomed gardens, particularly in the

Collecting

- The second most popular hobby of the British is their love for collecting. They collect everything from old cars to thimbles. A large number of people collect stamps, coins. There are collectors of ancient carpentry tools, unusual kitchen utensils, door handles. For the sake of replenishing his collection the Briton is ready to spend his fortune and even risk his reputation.

Pets

- The third main and favorite British hobby is pets. Pets are more than a hobby. It's a way of life. Pets in British families have a higher position than children.

Angling and football

- The most popular national sport is fishing, which the British always call "angling". It can be called a national sport that divides popularity with football.

- They are fond of the British and basketball, golf, rugby, swimming, do competitions for them. A lot of time is given to horseback riding, alpinism, sailing, well, and gambling.

Cricket

- Also, cricket for the British is more than a game. Cricket is a sport that uses a bat and ball. They play it every Sunday. Everyone considers this game a national form of summer leisure

- To search for information, the Internet.

