Charles Dickens is one of the greatest novelists in the English literature. In his books he showed a real world and people of Victorian England.

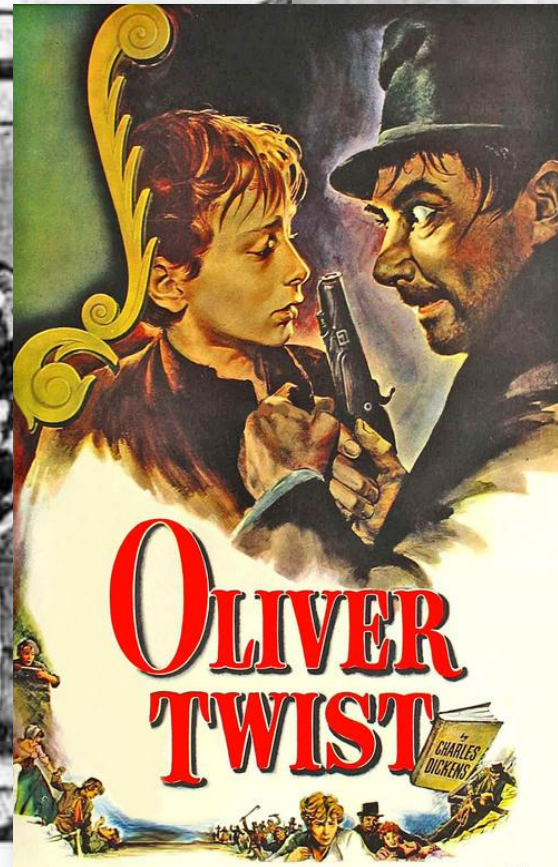

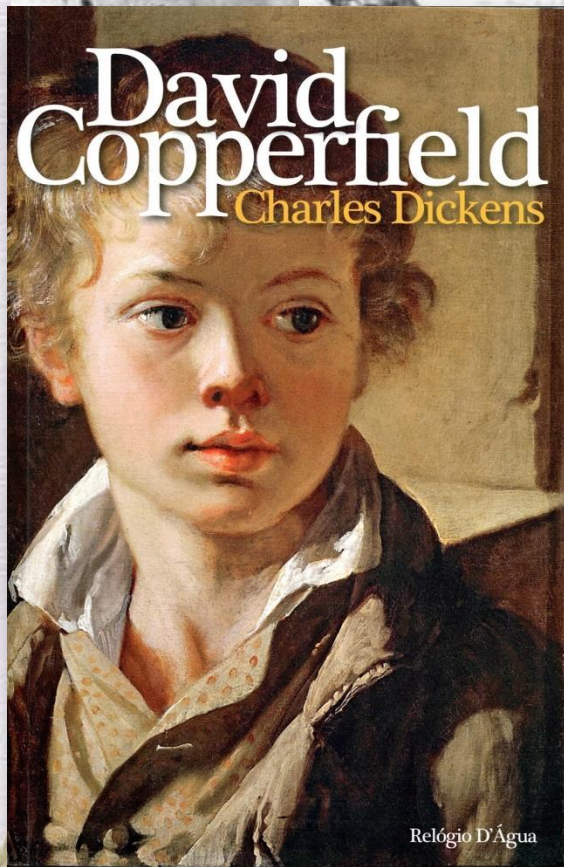

Charles Dickens was born in London in 1812. His father was a clerk and had eight children. His father always spent more money than he received. When Charles was 11 years old his family was put into prison for his father's debts. Charles had to give up the school and work.

At the age of 15 he was lucky to get a job in a London lawyer's office though he didn't like this job. When he was 16 he started to work for a newspaper. And by the age of 25 he became one of the best journalist in London.

“The Pickwick Papers” was his first great work which made him popular. His books became very popular in many countries and he spent much time abroad. In the last years of his life he began to meet with his readers and to give public readings from his books. These meetings were very successful.

He never stopped writing and travelling and he died very suddenly in 1870.
