

Anything, Anyone, Nothing, No One

Have you invited anyone to the party?

I haven't invited anyone. Have you?

Anyone and no one can be used to express ideas that have the same meaning.

Have you invited anyone to the party?

I have invited no one to the party.

25

26

27

28

Anyone is used with a negative verb.
No one is used with an affirmative verb.

I haven't invited
anyone.

I have invited no
one to the party.

25

26

27

28

Anyone is used with a negative verb.
No one is used with an affirmative verb.

I have invited X anyone.

25

26

27

28

Anyone is used with a negative verb.
No one is used with an affirmative verb.

I have invited anyone.

I have not invited
no one to the party.

25

26

27

28

Anything and nothing can be used to express ideas that have the same meaning.

I haven't said anything about it? Have you?

I have said nothing about it.

25

26

27

28

Anything is used with a negative verb.
Nothing is used with an affirmative verb.

I haven't said
anything about it?

I have said nothing about it.

25

26

27

28

Anything is used with a negative verb.
Nothing is used with an affirmative verb.

I have said anything
about it?

25

26

27

28

Anything is used with a negative verb.
Nothing is used with an affirmative verb.

I have said ~~anything~~
about it?

I haven't said
~~nothing~~ about it.

25

26

27

28

Anything, Anyone, Nothing, No One

Click on the best word to complete this sentence.

Jim doesn't know anything about making bread.

correct

incorrect

incorrect

incorrect

anything

nothing

anyone

no one

25

26

27

28

Anything, Anyone, Nothing, No One

Click on the best word to complete this sentence.

Jim knows nothing about making bread.

incorrect

correct

incorrect

incorrect

anything

nothing

anyone

no one

25

26

27

28

Anything, Anyone, Nothing, No One

Click on the best word to complete this sentence.

Jean didn't tell anyone about the surprise.

incorrect

incorrect

correct

incorrect

anything

nothing

anyone

no one

25

26

27

28

Anything, Anyone, Nothing, No One

Select the best word to complete this sentence:

Jean told no one about the surprise.

incorrect

incorrect

incorrect

correct

anything

nothing

anyone

no one

25

26

27

28

Anything, Anyone, Nothing, No One

The End

25

26

27

28

Created by Laurette Poulos Simmons