Hypothesis

- Hypothesis: in the century of high technologies, it is possible to learn a foreign language at a high level through online educational platforms

Introduction

- In the age of high technology, learning languages (and not only English) is easier than a turnip. The most important thing is to start studying it correctly. Of course, you can limit yourself to dictionaries or spend money on tutors, or you can watch movies in English, or even better – look for special sites for learning a foreign language.

- Lingualeo — an educational platform for learning and practicing a foreign language based on game mechanics.

Duolingo

- Free language learning and translation platform.

Survey

- We conducted a survey of 1st year students from different institutes and that's what came out of it:

Do you think that you need to improve your knowledge of a foreign language?

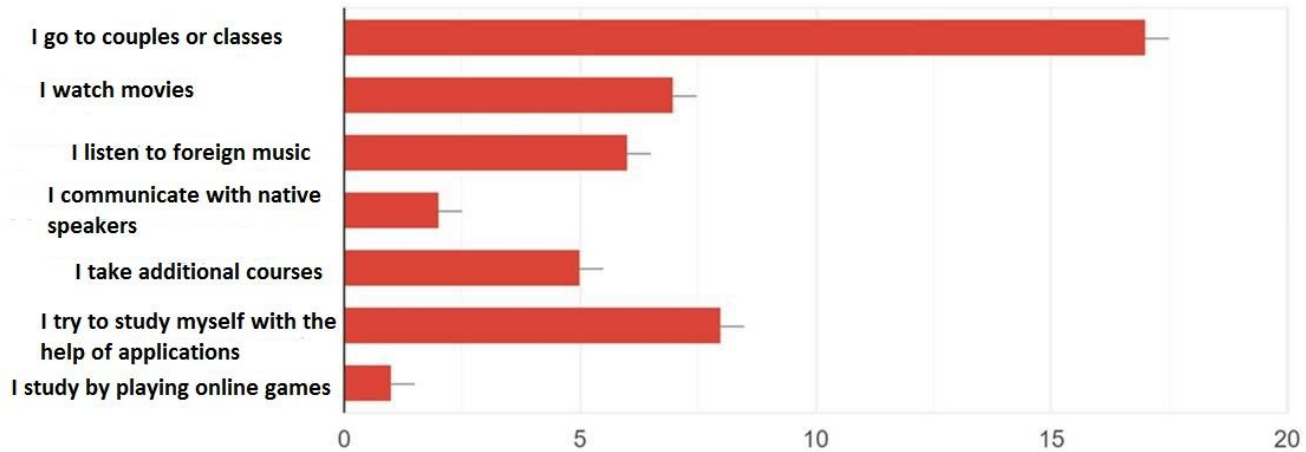

18

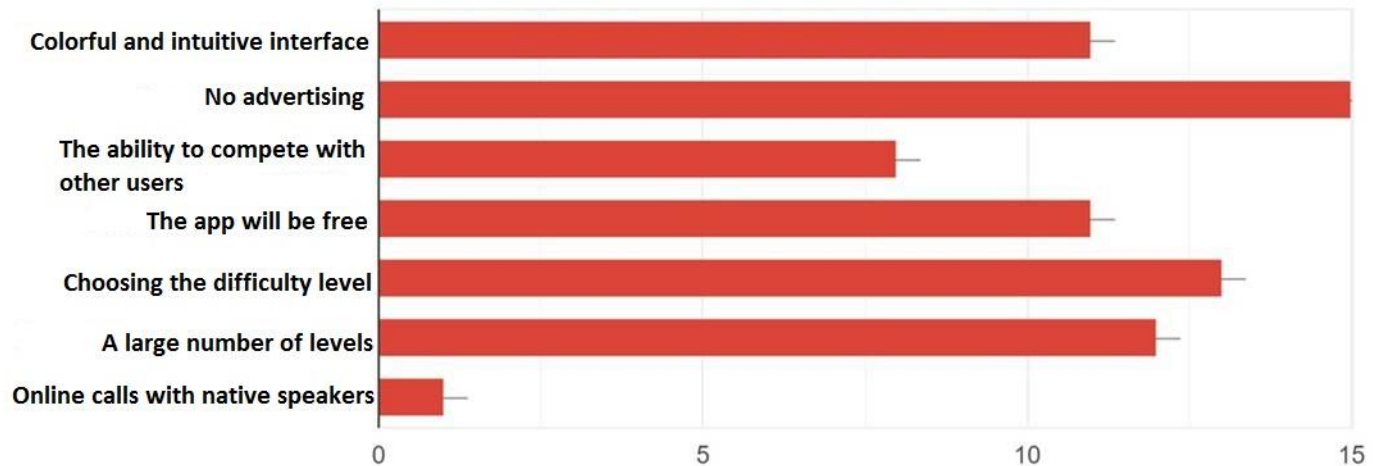

Which of these types of training do you use?

18

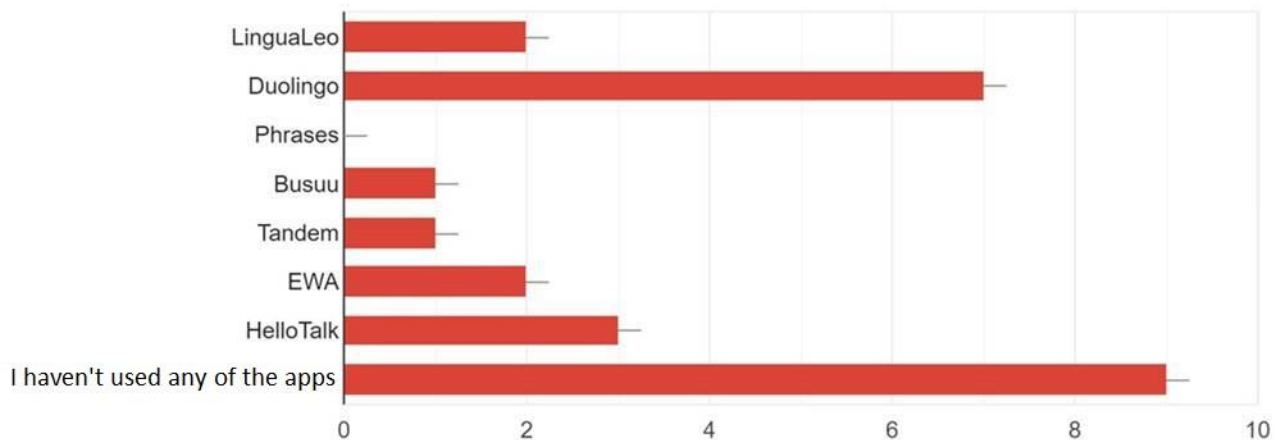

Which of these options would be able to attract you as new users of the application?

18

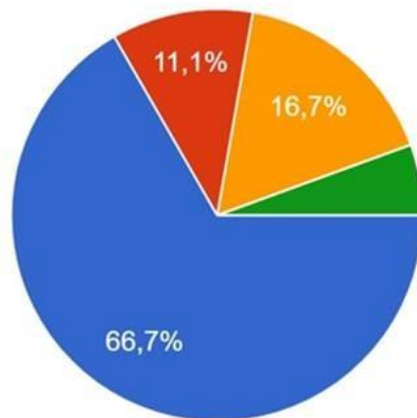

Have you used at least one of the applications mentioned below? If so, which ones?

17

Have we been able to strengthen your desire to persistently learn a foreign language?

18

- Of course, now I know a lot of options and have identified the most convenient ones for myself
- No, but I realized the importance of knowing a foreign language at the present time
- Yes, I did not know that there are other ways of learning besides compulsory and tedious couples or lessons
- No. I just wasted my time

Conclusion

- In conclusion I want to say that we confirmed the hypothesis, indeed, in the modern world, you can learn a foreign language via the Internet, and for free. But don't forget that no one educational platform can't help you without your own desire to learn a language.
