For our parents we always remain children that's why there are often some problems. Parents don't always understand that children have grown up and continue to take care of them.

Problems with friends

Each of us has friends with whom we always feel good and who always support us. But sometimes we quarrel with them because of different interests or the points of view.

Problems with teachers

Alas, problems also arise in mutual relations with teachers. We consider that many of them are too strict to us, though in most cases it's not so. Because of it many conflicts take place.

Problems with contemporary

Problems with contemporaries often arise because of misunderstanding, different successes in the affairs and different status in a society.

Conclusion

All the problems that we have to tell you, of course, are of great importance, but the man himself chooses his own path in life, and he decides what to do to avoid these or other problems.

I believe that the teenager had already formed identity and their personal problems may resolve itself.
