

A game is structured form of play, usually use for enjoyment and sometimes used as an educational tool. Games are distinct from work, which is usually carried out for money, and from art.

Attested as early as 2600 BC, games are a universal part of human experience and present in all cultures. The Royal Game of Ur, Senet, and Mancala are some of the oldest known games.

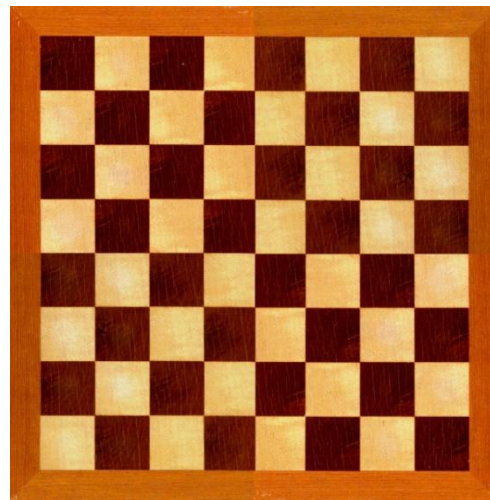

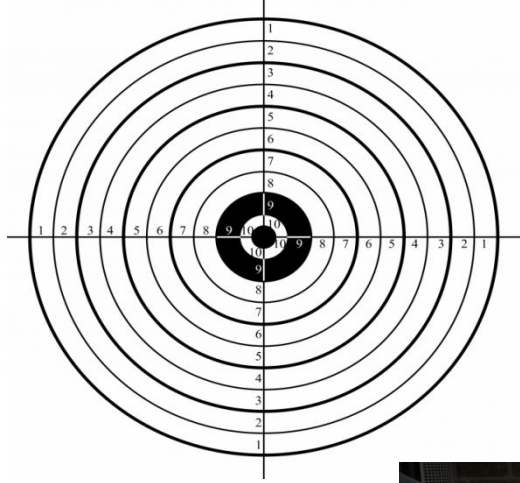

French sociologist Roger Caillois, in his book "Games and Men", defined a game as an activity that must have the following characteristics:

Fun, Uncertain, Non-productive, Rules, Fictitious.

Games are often classified by the components required to play them.

Games can be:

Sports

Tabletop games

Coordination games

Board games

Card games

Domino and tile games

Pencil and paper games

Guessing games

Video games

Online games

Role-playing games

Business games
