PORTUGAL

The westernmost country in Europe, Portugal, is famous for unreasonable modesty. She never boasted about the number of fashionable boutiques, did not lure to herself with unusual architecture, but she always fell in love with herself at first sight.

1. Find yourself at the edge of the earth

Everyone knows that Portugal, located in the south-west of the Iberian Peninsula, was just at the outlet to the Atlantic Ocean. Cape Cabo da Roca is the most extreme point on the western side of Eurasia. That is why the locals call this rocky cliff the end of the earth. Looking from it towards the ocean, one can imagine that there is a whole unknown ahead, and only then does the American continent begin. In this place, right on the edge of the cliff, you can get an unforgettable pleasure from the power of the elements, which will surely inspire new thoughts. And it is also a reason to visit Portugal and go with your loved one "even to the ends of the world" - that's where he is.

2. Become a witness to bullfighting in Portuguese Surely you know that bullfighting is a traditional Spanish bullfighting show.

However, in Portugal, a seemingly neighboring country, the rules for conducting battles were revised. First of all, the bullfight is called Torada and, despite the comparative cruelty, it fascinates with its beauty so much that it is worth visiting Portugal only for its sake. Also, the fact that it is strictly not allowed to kill a bull in public is arousing greater respect for her. After the completion of the traditional event, he is simply returned to the herd. If, in the event of a battle, the bull is injured, he will be cured and left to breed. The very same "knight on horseback" - a caballero, also insured against mortal wounds. He puts on special leather covers on the bull's horns. In the arena, he is helped by the furcados, who take the bull into the corral. An interesting and unusual sight.

Try a new sport The proximity to the water makes water sports highly developed.

Surfing, diving, water skiing, windsurfing. You definitely won't want to visit Portugal just to sunbathe in the sun.
