Youth

Was born in 1981. She graduated from Walt Whitman High School in 1996 and moved to New York, where she took the pseudonym "LP". Her mother is a Neapolitan, and her father is half Sicilian, half Irish. In 2010 she moved to Los Angeles. David Lowery of the Cracker group, accidentally hitting her speech, praised Laura's voice and invited her to participate in recording one of the tracks to the album of her band Gentleman's Blues (1998).

Career accomplishment

Lowery followed up by producing LP's debut album, Heart-Shaped Scar, released in 2001 through Koch Records.

LP's second album, Suburban Sprawl & Alcohol, was released in June 2004 through Lightswitch Records. On the record, she collaborated with the songwriter and music producer Linda Perry. However, in spite of the extensive touring to promote the release and positive reviews from music critics, the album failed to gain widespread recognition.

In 2006, LP appeared at the music conference South by Southwest and reportedly sparked a bidding war amongst major music labels, eventually being signed by L.A. Reid to his Island Def Jam Music Group record label, part of the Universal Music Group.

In August 2010, it was announced that LP had signed with RedOne's record label, 2101 Records. LP landed her first major breakthrough as a songwriter, co-writing Rihanna's song, "Cheers (Drink to That)".

On September 16, 2014, a music video for "Tokyo Sunrise" officially premiered on Time magazine's website.

In September 2015, the song "Muddy Waters", the first single from LP's upcoming fourth studio album, was released. In June 2016, this song featured in the violent and emotionally charged closing scene of the season four finale of Netflix's original series Orange Is The New Black. In November, the second single, titled "Lost on You", was also released, while LP held a residency at the No Vacancy club.[21] Both songs originate from a collaboration with Mike Del Rio. An EP titled Death Valley was released on June 17, 2016.

Interesting Facts

1. The song "Love Will Keep You Up All Night", composed during the collaboration with Island Def Jam, was released in 2007 as one of the tracks of the album of the Unbreakable band Backstreet Boys.
2. The next notable breakthrough was the song "Beautiful People", performed by Christina Aguilera and included in the official soundtrack in the film "Burlesque", released in November 2010 on RCA Records.
3. In June 2016, "Muddy Waters" sounded in the final scene of one of the episodes of the series Netflix.
4. As a child, LP hesitated about her voice and sang only when a vacuum cleaner or lawnmower was running. Thousands of fans around the world are now admiring her voice.

5. Androgynous sense of style LP has no analogues in its impeccability. A single glance at her is enough to admit - she was born for a man's suit.

6. "My mother died before she found out that I was a lesbian, and my dad thought for a long time that this was just a figure of speech and only recently realized that it was not so. However, I never received criticism and negativity from my parents. I do not get it now either," she said in one of the interviews.

7. Sunglasses are an integral part of her style. "I wear them even at night," the singer jokes. "I would not take sunglasses at all, if it did not create certain inconveniences." It always seemed to me that glasses would be a part of my image, like Roy Orbisna. "

WHEN WE'RE HIGH

My opinion

Personally for me LP is a unique singer, I believe that her voice is a separate genre in music. Her music is certainly not for everyone, but to understand it, you need to feel it. Yesterday she had a concert in Kiev, everyone came out with inexpressible sensations. As a person she is very open to the public. My favorites are: Other People, Tightrope, Lost On You, Muddy Waters, WHEN WE'RE HIGH. No Witness.
