Reading test

In the city

In the streets, roads and squares of the town we see people walking and vehicles driving. The vehicles are trams, trolley-busses, taxis and other motor-cars, motor-scooters and bicycles.

Along the streets are street lamps, at the corners of the streets there are traffic lights. The street light are switched on when it gets dark; they are switched off when it gets light. When the red traffic light is switched on the traffic stops, when the green light is switched on the vehicles drive on.

Along the streets we also see bus stops, trolley-bus and tram stops, where people get on and off. People wait at the stops for buses, trams and trolley-buses. They get on and off public transport.

At big crossroads in large towns and cities there are subways for pedestrians, and flyovers for vehicles.

In England, vehicles drive on the left. In our country the traffic drives on the right.
