Hong Kong is a state within a state with its own laws and culture. It is a meeting place of the West and the East, where high technologies coexist with the traditional way of life, skyscrapers — with fishing villages, and shopping malls — with chaotic floating markets.

Historically, Hong Kong is a former colony of Great Britain, and now it is a special administrative region of China, striking at the pace of its progress.

Climate

In the dry season, cool air blows from the mainland, which brings dry sunny weather. Precipitation during this period is rare.

The climate of Hong Kong is subtropical monsoon. It is characterized by a cool dry season, which lasts from December to March, and a hot and stuffy rainy season, which lasts from April to November

During the rainy season, humid air blows from the Pacific Ocean, bringing heavy rainfall.

Getting around

Hong Kong's public transport is exceptionally diverse (land, underground and water), accessible, convenient and ubiquitous. There is always a stop of some kind of transport within walking distance.

Hong Kong Tram

At each public transport stop and metro stations there is information about the fare for passing routes. The fare depends on the distance, the carrier's company and the comfort of transport.

A nighttime photograph of the Hong Kong skyline, featuring numerous illuminated skyscrapers and buildings. The text "Thanks for your attention!" is overlaid in the center of the image. The buildings are lit up with various colors, including white, yellow, and blue. The sky is a mix of blue and purple, suggesting dusk or dawn. The water in the foreground is dark and reflects some of the lights.
