What is it?

A Green party is a formally organized political party based on the principles of green politics, such as social justice, environmentalism and nonviolence. Greens believe that these issues are inherently related to one another as a foundation for world peace.

What do they do?

Green Parties have a lot of activities. They are trying to stop pollution of the environment and making factories less dangerous for nature.

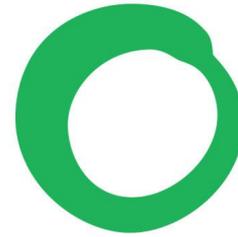

In what countries are they working?

Green parties exist in nearly 90 countries around the world; many are members of Global Greens. They exist in countries like: Brazil, Columbia, Lebanon, Canada, New Zealand and many more.

Who are their friends?

A few organizations are working with green parties. They are helping to raise public's awareness of need to protect the environment and raising funds. They have their own campaigns. These friends are: Friends of the Earth, Greenpeace and World Fund of Nature.
