On the embankment before the main façade of the Academy of Arts there is a granite pier. It was erected after the design of the architect Konstantin Thon between 1832 and 1834.

Konstantin Andreyevich Thon, also spelled Ton (October 26, 1794 – January 25, 1881) was an official architect of Imperial Russia during the reign of Nicholas I.

Konstantin, born in St. Petersburg to the family of a German jeweler, was one of three Thon brothers who all rose to become notable architects. He studied at the Imperial Academy of Arts (1803–15) under the Empire Style architect Andrey Voronikhin, best remembered for his work on the Kazan Cathedral, situated right in the middle of the Nevsky Prospekt. He studied Italian art in Rome from 1819 to 1828, and on his return home was admitted to the academy as its member (1830) and professor (1833). In 1854, he was appointed rector of the architectural division of the academy.

Thon first attracted public attention with his sumptuous design for the interiors of the Academy building on the Neva embankment.

The lower terrace is decorated with two Egyptian sphinxes on high pedestals.

The pier is embellished with granite benches images of gryphons and stylized bronze girandoles each of which stands on four lion's paws.

The sphinxes were found during excavations in ancient Thebes, the ancient capital of Egypt.

Each sphinx features the head of the Egyptian pharaoh Amenhotep III and lion's body.

The son of Amenhotep was a notorious pharaoh-reformer Echnaton

Akhenaten (also spelled Echnaton, meaning "living spirit of Aten") known before the fifth year of his reign as Amenhotep IV and was a Pharaoh of the 18th dynasty of Egypt who ruled for 17 years and died perhaps in 1336 BC or 1334 BC.

Nefertiti (1370 BC –1330 BC) was the Great Royal Wife of the Egyptian Pharaoh Akhenaten. Nefertiti and her husband were known for a religious revolution, in which they worshiped one god only, Aten, or the sun disc.

The sphinxes were bought by Russia from Egypt in 1831. They were brought from the banks of the Nile to Saint-Petersburg in 1832.

On the pedestal the words are inscribed: “ Brought to Saint-Petersburg in 1832 from the ancient Egyptian city of Thebes”
