

How to behave if you are a guest in Russia.

Arriving in Russia you must visit Red Square.
It is located in Moscow.

To see someone familiar or the other, we shake hands. Compressed on of hands is a gesture of greeting or farewell.

If you are a guest in a Russian home, you must take off your shoes at the door, remove outer clothing and hang it.

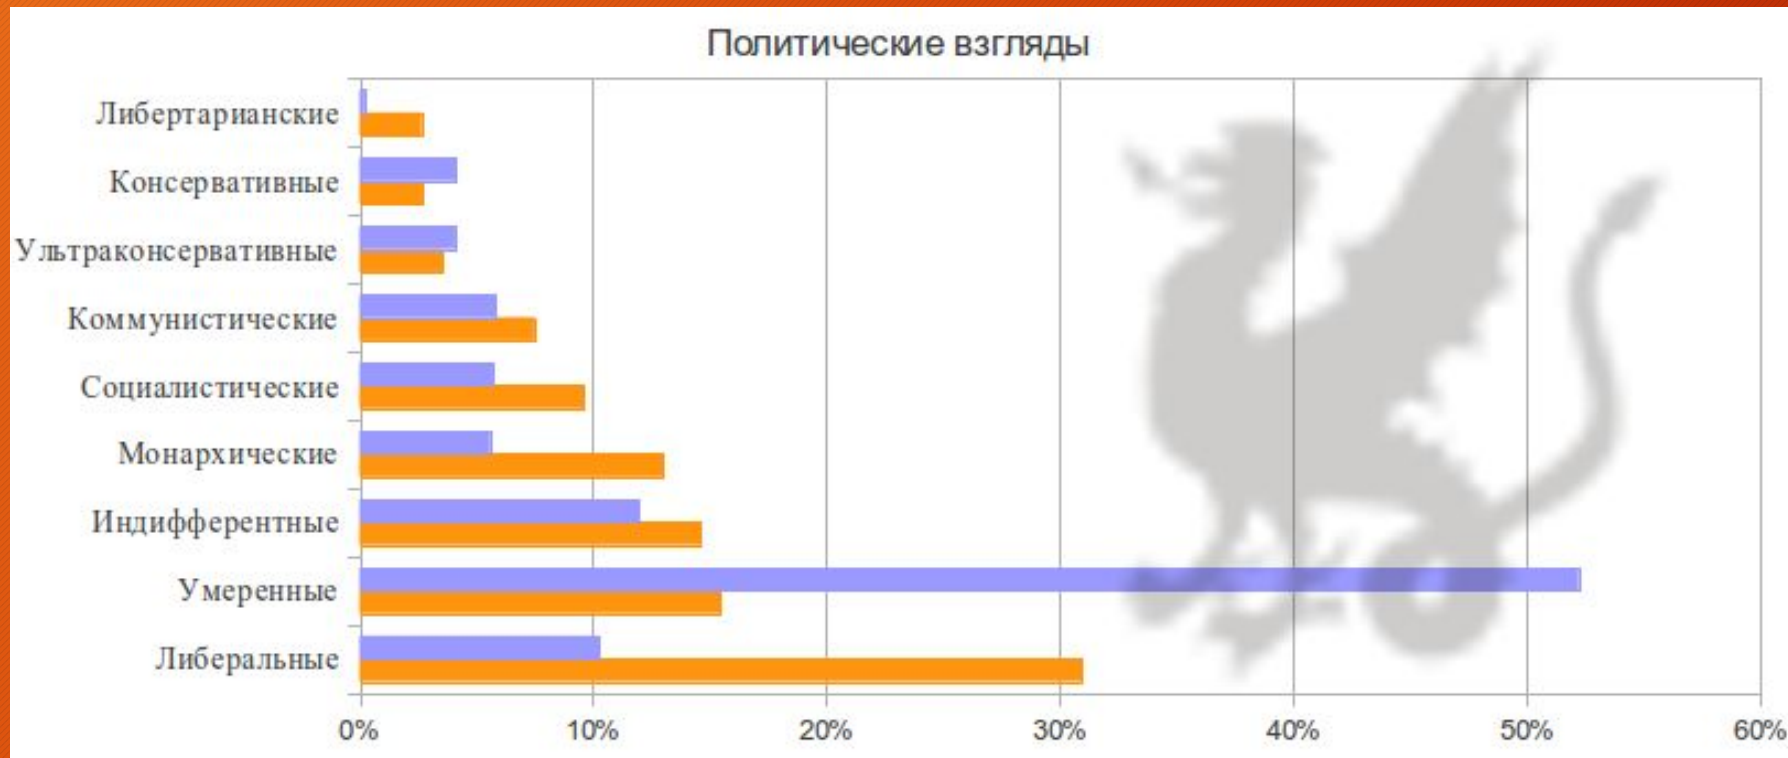

If you want to ask directions on the street or ask a question to a stranger, ask first if he spoke English? Try to learn a few simple phrases, like "Thank you" and "Please"

Show respect when talking about the Second World war or the USSR, especially with the older generation. It is a serious issue for the Russians.

Try not to talk about their political views, especially if they are contrary to the current political structure of Russia or the USSR.

Thank you for your attention!
