What is an infomercial?

An infomercial is a form of advertisement which is aimed at educating the customer about a product or a series of products via television in the form of a program. Infomercial typically lasts longer than a regular advertisement and, thus, is more detailed.

What persuasive techniques might be used in infomercials?

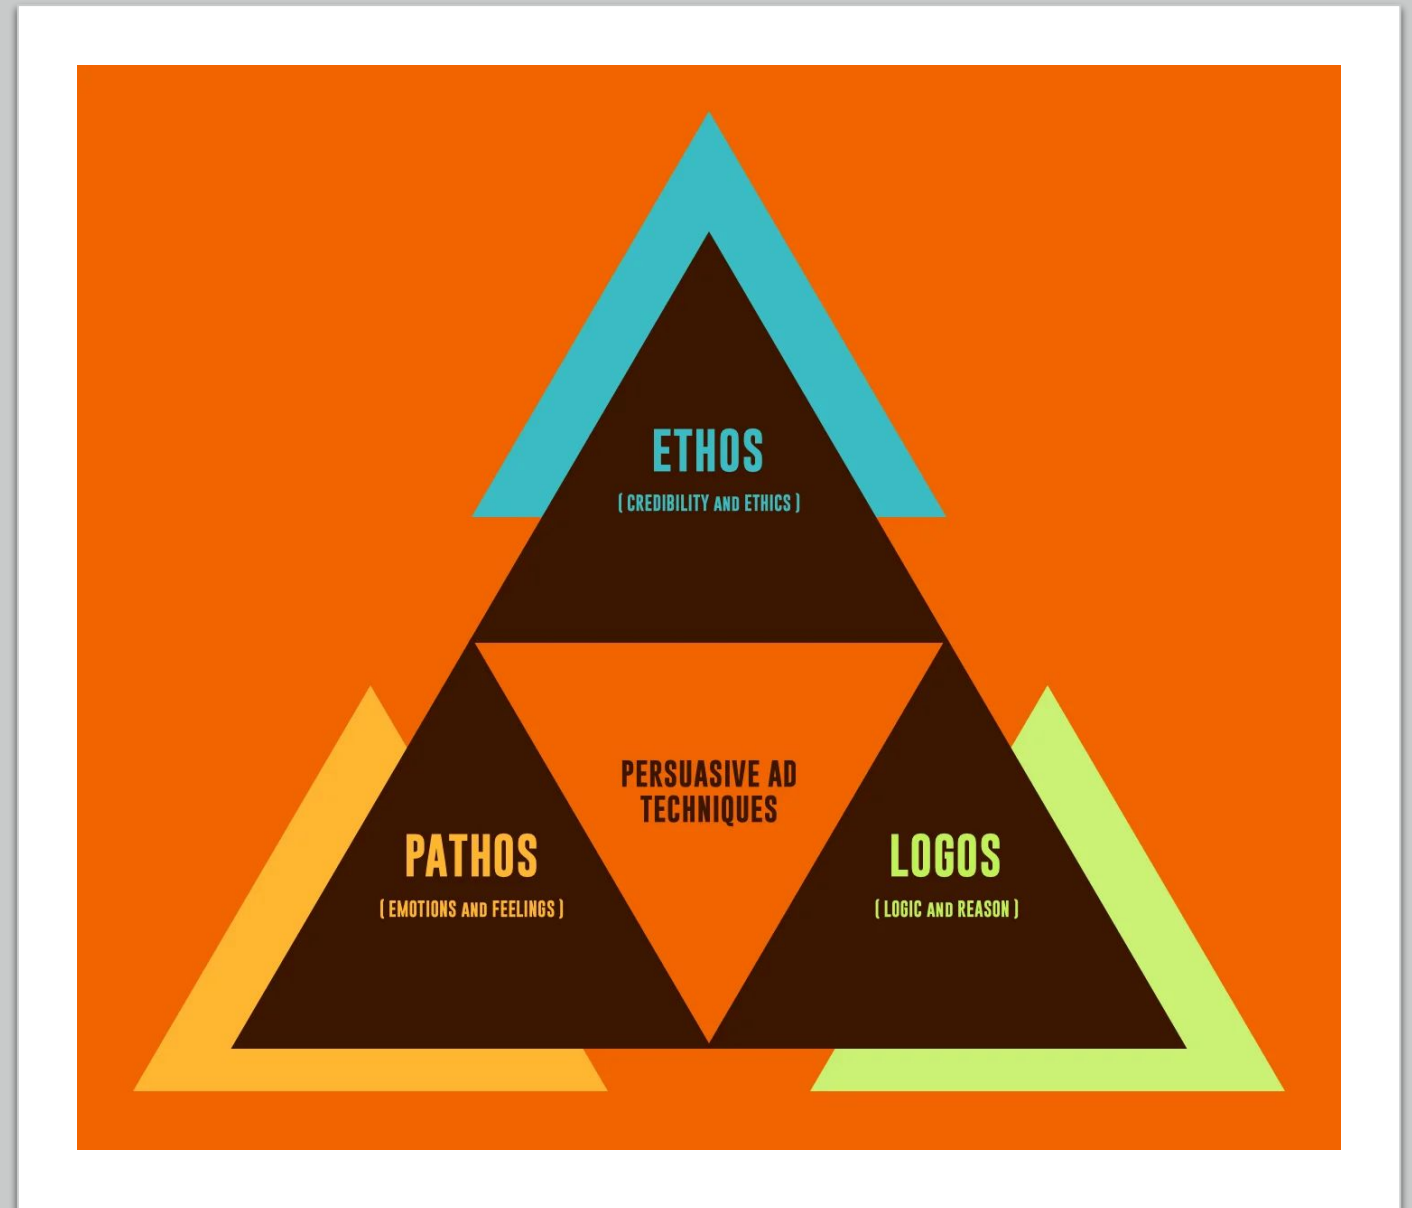

Ethos, Pathos, and Logos

1. Ethos = an ethical or moral argument

2. Pathos = an emotional argument

3. Logos = a logical argument

Kairos= “right place, right time”

ETHOS DEFINITION

What is ethos?

- Ethos is the persuasive technique that appeals to an audience by highlighting credibility. Ethos advertisement techniques invoke the superior “character” of a speaker, presenter, writer, or brand.
- Ethos examples aim to convince the audience that the advertiser is reliable and ethical. It's easier to make a decision when someone you respect signs off on it, right?
- This is broadly the function of ethos in commercials.
- When an esteemed public figure endorses a product, it validates it to the end consumer.
- An ethos advertisement plays off the consumer's respect for a given spokesperson.
- Through that respect, the spokesperson appears convincing, authoritative and trustworthy enough to listen to. Of the types of persuasive techniques in advertising, ethos is best used to unlock trust.

- A quick way to appeal to a viewer's emotions? A cute animal. A devastated family. A love story. Overcoming great odds. An inspirational song and imagery.

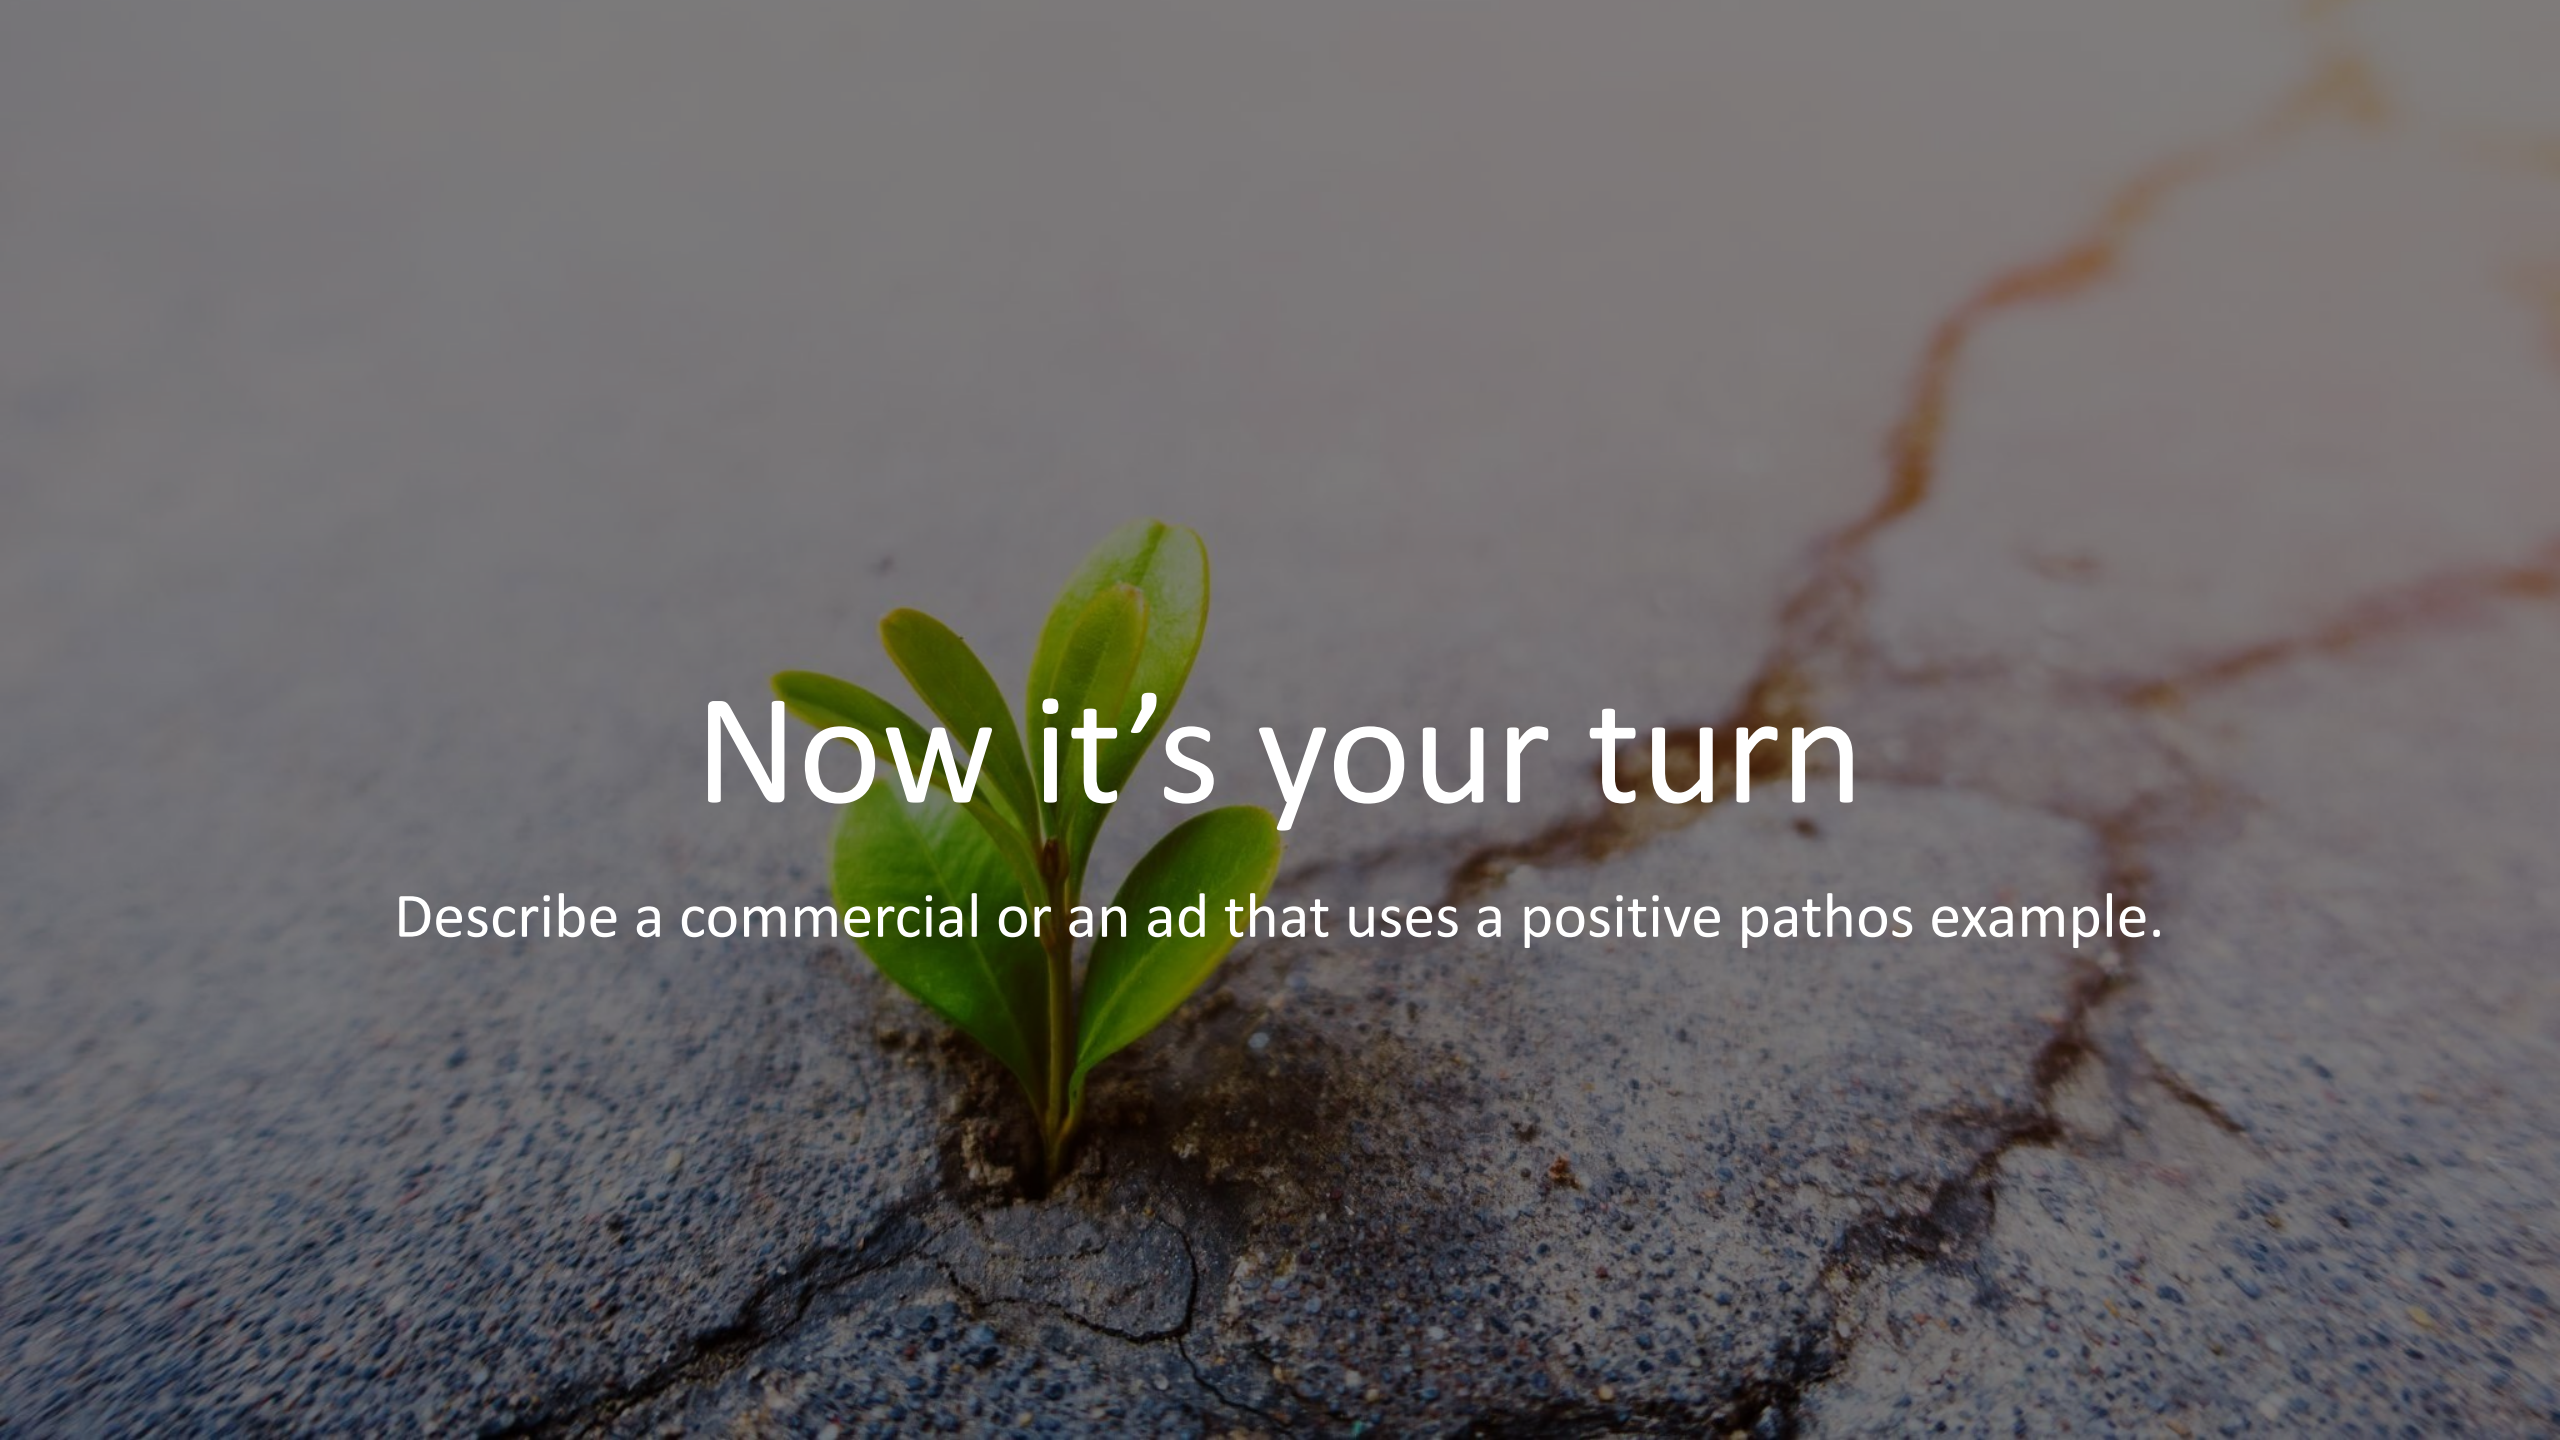

PETA (People for the ethical treatment of animals)

- What does pathos mean to the youth-oriented branch of PETA, which is called PETA2? Well, it means evoking alarm, disgust, fear, and sadness in the audience by slicing open Noah Cyrus, aka “Miley’s little sister.”

Neither are cats, frogs, rats, pigs, or other animals killed for dissection. Please choose not to dissect

#D/SSECTIONKILLS

Now it's your turn

Describe a commercial or an ad that uses a positive pathos example.

LOGOS DEFINITION

What is logos?

- Logos is the persuasive technique that aims to convince an audience by using logic and reason. Also called “the logical appeal,” logos examples in advertisement include the citation of statistics, facts, charts, and graphs.
- Ever told someone to “listen to reason” during an argument? This is what logos does. The best logos advertisement examples are when a speaker appeals to logic.
- Statistics, surveys, facts, and historical data can make a product seem like a more reasonable decision. Whether the data is sound or not is another story...

Tips

Create a WOW moment.

- One way to ensure your infomercial is memorable is by blowing the listener or recipient's mind. You might do this by stating a fact that is counter-intuitive, demonstrating the invention/service's best selling point in a shocking way, telling an outlandish story, or emphasizing its most unique feature.

Appeal to emotions.

- Understanding your customers is central to consistently nailing infomercials, and when you do, it's good to convey that. One way to do so is to revolve your infomercial around their life experience and find commonalities between you and them.

Back it up with facts.

- While consumers make decisions more often with emotion, they still need to rationalize the decision to themselves and/or other key stakeholders. By providing statistics or case studies that support the emotional appeal, you're providing credibility that will help them feel as though they're making the right decision.

Tap into their fear of missing out.

- Fear of missing out (FOMO) is a powerful motivator and can create a great sense of urgency. The last thing you want is for them to be dazzled by your sales pitch but procrastinate long enough for that feeling to fade away. Instead, get them to take action right away.

Educate your customers.

- You want to establish yourself as an authority in your space. Some interesting, relevant facts can help grab your customers' attention and add a certain degree of legitimacy and trustworthiness to your pitch.

In class practice: Group work

- Create a poster/presentation advertising an invention
 1. Work in groups of 4 Choose an invention
 2. Come up with an interesting and catchy slogan
 3. Create a sense of urgency to make viewers purchase it
 4. Establish product credibility using statistics, quotations, testimonials
 5. Ask a professional to become a host
 6. Describe the best features and benefits of your invention/service
 7. Include a call to action

You have 15 min to prepare your presentations/posters. Each team will be given 10 min to present their work.
