The formation of Zero Conditional

Zero conditional expresses the situations that are always true if something happens. Zero conditional is formed by the use of the present in the if-clause and the present simple in the result clause.

Example: If you heat water to 100 degrees, it boils.
(It is general true)

Если вы нагреете воду, она кипит.

Conditional I

Conditional I is real, because it is used for real – or possible – situations.

Conditional I is formed by the use of the present simple in the if – clause and future simple in the result clause.

Example: If it rains, I will stay at home. (It is a real situation)

Если идёт дождь, я останусь дома.

Conditional II

Conditional II is often called the “unreal” conditional because it is used for unreal or impossible situations. This conditional provides an imaginary result for a given situation.

Conditional II is formed by the use of the past simple in the if – clause and would + infinitive in the result clause.

Example: If I were rich, I would help the poor animals. (It is an imaginary result)

I wish I would go abroad.

Conditional III

Conditional III is often called the “past” conditional because it expresses only past situations with unreal results.

Conditional III is formed by the use of the past perfect in the if clause and would + the present perfect in the result clause.

Example: If people hadn't polluted the planet, many animals would have lived. (It is an unreal result)

Если бы люди не загрязняли планету, многие животные были бы живы.
