

B: Dentist. Hi Johnny, what's happened?

B: Johnny. Hello. I have a toothache!

B: Dentist. Let me see. Aha. You have a cavity there. Don't worry, I'll help you.

Johnny. Will it hurt?

Dentist. No. But first, let me ask you some questions.

Johnny. Ok.

Dentist. How often do you brush your teeth?

Johnny. I always brush them in the evening. But I don't always have time to brush them in the morning. I'm always late for school.

Dentist. I see. Well, Johnny, you'll need to find time to brush your teeth.

Johnny. Ok.

Dentist. Do you eat a lot of sweets?

Johnny. I do, I love chocolates!

Dentist. Do you ever eat fruit and vegetables?

Johnny. Sometimes.

Dentist. Well, promise me this, Johnny. You will brush your teeth in the morning, in the evening and after you eat chocolate, and you will eat lots of apples and carrots.

Johnny. Will I have good teeth then?

Dentist. I promise.

Johnny. Ok.

An animal doctor is called a vet. Some vets work for zoos or animal hospitals. Many have their own private offices. Vets do most of the same things that doctors do. They take the animal's temperature, listen to their heart beat and take X-rays. They also decide what kind of medicine a sick animal may need. If an animal is too thin, too fat or has specific health problems, the doctor may recommend a special diet. It takes about six to seven years of university studies to become a vet.
