

GREENWICH PARK

Greenwich Park - old hunting Park in Greenwich and one of the largest green areas in the South-East London. One of the Royal Parks of London and the first enclosed (1433), it covers an area of 183 acres (0.7 km<sup>2</sup>). The hotel offer wonderful views of the river Thames, Island of the Dogs and the Centre of London. The Park is open from 6 a.m. for pedestrians and from 7 a.m. to service all day,

REGENT'S PARK

Regent Park is one of the most beautiful Royal parks and a green zone in Central London. The Park was opened to the public in 1838, its arrangement in 1812 took John Nash, who had planned to build in this territory 40 villas in such a way that each of them was a wholly different, and not visible were the neighboring buildings. The Palace, which is intended for the Prince Regent, and was not completed, and villas were built only eight and up to our days there were only three. In the Park are distinguished Gardens of the Queen Mary, known plenty of floral curtains and a gorgeous rose garden.

In the summer Regent's Park is a venue for open-air plays, musical concerts. On the territory of the Park is also famous London zoo.

HOLLAND PARK

Holland Park is located West of Central London and is considered to be almost the most romantic place of the city, filled with lush vegetation and a secluded corner. Surroundings in Holland Park - fashionable district of London, with expensive villas and embassies of different foreign countries.

The Park was constructed in the XIX century in the lands of the former Jacobin estate. Centre of the manor was mansion «Dutch house», which later on the name of the Park and the area around it.

North side in Holland Park filled with lush vegetation, the Central part is located around the ruins of «Dutch house», the southern part is designed for sports and entertainment. The ruins of the «Dutch house» form an end face of buildings of Opera Holland Park. In the Park there is also a private orangery, cricket, tennis courts, a graceful Japanese garden

GREEN PARK

Green Park is a park in the City of Westminster, central London. One of the Royal Parks of London, it covers 19 hectares (47 acres) between Hyde Park and St. James's Park. Together with Kensington Gardens and the gardens of Buckingham Palace, these parks form an almost unbroken stretch of open land reaching from Whitehall and Victoria station to Kensington and Notting Hill. By contrast with its neighbours, Green Park has no lakes, no buildings and few monuments, having only the Canada Memorial by Pierre Granche, the Constance Fund Fountain and the RAF Bomber Command, opened in 2012.

