NEGLIGENCE (DEFENITION)

The behavior usually consists of actions, and can also consist of inaction when there is some duty to act

Negligence is the failure to exercise a level of care necessary to protect others from harm.

Types of negligence

- Often negligence is medical crime (a doctor can help some one but he didn't it, or a doctor exceeded his responsibilities and another situations).
- Production negligence (when company know about violations, and continuing do their job).
- Also spontaneous emergencies on the street(for example when one person was dying and another person, who can save him, did nothing and etc).

Gross Negligence

When negligent conduct is seen as extreme when compared to regular negligence, it is considered to be “gross negligence” in the eyes of the law. Examples of grossly negligent acts may include:

- A driver speeding through a busy parking lot where pedestrians are walking hits a shopping cart, forcing it into a man, resulting in serious injuries
- A provider of home care fails to show up as scheduled, and giving food and water to his elderly patient only once in three days.

Professional Negligence

Professional negligence may occur in a situation in which an individual has represented himself as having greater skills and abilities than the average person. For example, a person claiming to be a plumbing contractor would be assumed to have greater skills in plumbing than a neighbor who has a bit of experience tinkering with his own plumbing.

Main rule of responsibility

Actually negligence is such type of crime, which people must to avoid (be careful on work, look up everywhere and have sense of responsibility for his rights and responsibilities)

Manual

- So there is no protection from negligence. Only you own feels of responsibility, your attention will save you from negligence, so be careful because law is everywhere and people can't hide from justice.
