Ice Hockey Tryouts

A close-up photograph of a hockey stick and a puck resting on an ice surface. The stick is positioned diagonally from the top right towards the center, with the blade pointing towards the left. A single black puck is placed on the ice directly in front of the blade. The background is a textured, light blue-grey ice surface with some faint scratches and lines.

Tryout hockey season is upon us. This can be crucial time for all the players. For so many players, tryouts are harder than actual games. It does not have to be. Take these tips to make sure that tryouts are both fun and successful for all the players.

First Tryout

A close-up photograph of a hockey stick and a puck on an ice rink. The hockey stick is dark blue with a wooden shaft and is positioned diagonally across the frame. A black puck is centered in the foreground on the ice. The background is dark, suggesting an indoor arena.

Success is earned not given

You need to do the effort or practice throughout the off season if you want to Develop yourself as a hockey player. Success comes to those who work hard for it.

Second Tryout

Hockey is Political

Ice hockey is considered as a political sport. This means in order to be a doing well, you need to be on the coach's good side before tryouts even start. Try and make a link with the coach of your target team before performing on the rink.

Third Tryout

Don't Mind the Letters

Try not to think about the "letters" of the league that you are in. Each and every player's development at a different rate and occasionally having more ice time on a lower league is a lot better for your hockey professional career than riding the bench in a competitive league.
