ENGLAND

- England and Great Britain are sometimes mistaken for being the same country. But in fact, England is a part of Great Britain – or the United Kingdom (the UK.

FLAG OF ENGLAD

- The flag of England is derived from St George's Cross (heraldic blazon: Argent, a cross gules). The association of the red cross as an emblem of England can be traced back to the Middle Ages, and it was used as a component in the design of the Union Flag in 1606.[2] Since the 1990s it has been in increasingly wide use, particularly at national sporting events.

GEOGRAPHY

- England shares borders with Scotland to the north and Wales to the west. It lies on the island of Great Britain and over one hundred smaller islands. It is washed by the Irish Sea, the Celtic Sea, the North Sea and the English Channel. Plains and low hills cover most of England, but some regions are mountainous. The climate is temperate maritime, with mild temperatures.

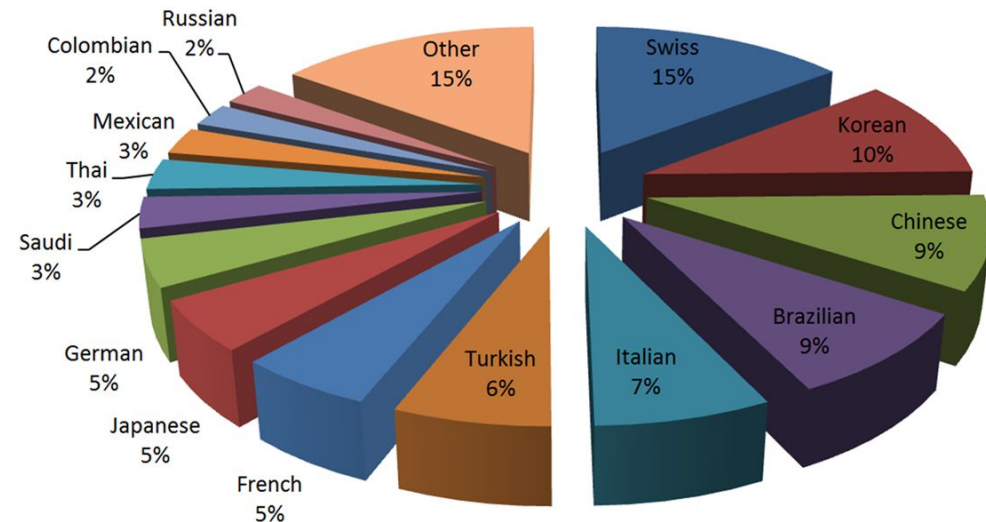

ECONOMY

- England's economy is one of the largest in the world. It is also the largest part of the UK's economy. The most significant industries are chemical, pharmaceutical, automotive, aerospace, software industries and tourism.

POPULATION

- England's population is over 54 million people – it is 84% of the population of the UK. Most people live in London and its suburbs. There are also other nationalities

CULTURE

- The main language is English and the mostly widespread religion is Christianity. The culture of England has developed over many centuries. English architecture is stunning. There is a huge number of outstanding works of art created by Englishmen in literature (Shakespeare, Austen, Dickens, Orwell, Tolkien, J. K. Rowling etc.) and music (Purcell, Sullivan, The Beatles, Pink Floyd, Queen etc.).

Thanks for remark
