

CINEMA. MOVIES.

Motion Picture, a series of images that are projected onto a screen to create the illusion of motion.

Motion pictures—also called movies, films, or the cinema—are one of the most popular forms of entertainment.

There are many types of motion pictures,
but the most significant categories are:

- feature films - художественные
- animated films - мультипликационные
- documentaries - документальные
- industrial films – производственные (рекламные)
- educational films - образовательные

Feature films are the movies most commonly shown in large movie theaters. They typically last at least one and one-half hours and tell a fictional story or a story based on real events but portrayed by actors.

Animated movies follow the same format as features, but use images created by artists. These films create the illusion of movement from a series of two-dimensional drawings, three-dimensional objects, or computer-generated images.

Another form of film is the documentary, which deals primarily with fact, not fiction. Documentaries do not often appear in theaters, but they are seen regularly on cable and broadcast television.

Industrial films are made by companies that wish to publicize their products or generate a favorable public image.

Educational films are specifically intended to be shown in classrooms. Their aim is to instruct, on subjects from history to driving skills.
