

Universal Declaration of Human Rights

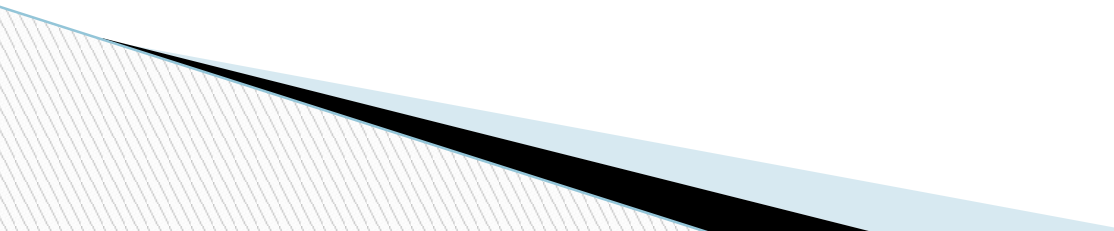

The right to speak freely

Insertion

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights - document accepted at the third session of the UN General Assembly dated 10 December 1948. The Declaration is the first global list of rights that all people have.

December 10, 1948 the UDHR accepted in the USSR and in other 47 countries.

This document has been translated into many languages of the world (more than 350 in 2009) and is the most translated document in the world.

The right to speak freely

The right to speak freely - the human right to freely express their ideas. At the present time it includes freedom of expression, both in speech and in writing (freedom of the press and media).

This right is useful, but it has its own pluses and minuses. Let's look:

The most important plus - It is access to information about matters in the country and the world. Everyone, if he is interested in a question, can freely find an answer in the global resources of the media.

But there is an minus -
the uncontrolled freedom of speech can create a whole series of lies. It could break the stability of the country as well as the media have the an ability to control the human mind.

The life of the world
in our time is not possible without freedom of speech!
