Evolution of the English Language

- the Norman conquest in 1066 - the Norman French dialect arrived in Britain
- Old English no longer dominated
- spoken by the aristocracy
- Middle English

Evolution of the English Language

- the loss of gender for nouns, some word forms (called inflections), the silent "e," and the coalescing of a more constrained word order
- people with the Norman French background wrote down the English words as they sounded
- the establishment of the S[ubject]-V[erb]-O[bject] type of word-order as normal
- Chaucer wrote in Middle English in the late 1300s

Chaucer's Canterbury Tales

*"Whan that Aprill, with his shoures soote
The droghte of March hath perced to the roote
And bathed every veyne in swich licour,
Of which vertu engendred is the flour..."*

Evolution of the English Language

- the monosyllabic words for basic concepts, bodily functions, and body parts inherited from Old English and shared with the other Germanic languages
- God, man, tin, iron, life, death, limb, nose, ear, foot, mother, father, brother, earth, sea, horse
- Words from French are often polysyllabic terms for the institutions of the Conquest (church, administration, law), for things imported with the Conquest (castles, courts, prisons), and terms of high culture and social status (fashion, literature, art, decoration).

Usage of Modern English

- 1500
- English incorporated many words from Latin and Greek
- the Great Vowel Shift = from the 1400s through the 1750s
- For example, a Middle English long high vowel such as e eventually changed to a Modern English long i, and a Middle English long oo evolved into a Modern English ou sound. Long mid- and low-vowels changed as well, such as a long a evolving to a Modern English long e and an ah sound changing to the long a sound.

Today's English

- English is ever adopting new words from other languages (350 languages, according to David Crystal in "English as a Global Language").
- About three-quarters of its words come from Greek and Latin
- Ammon Shea points out in "Bad English: A History of Linguistic Aggravation," "it is certainly not a Romance language, it is a Germanic one. Evidence of this may be found in the fact that it is quite easy to create a sentence without words of Latin origin, but pretty much impossible to make one that has no words from Old English."
