The history of English

The victorious Normans made up the new aristocracy and the Anglo-Saxon people became their servants. The Norman aristocracy spoke a Norman dialect of French, a longue of Latin origin, while the Anglo-Saxons spoke English, a tongue of Germanic origin.

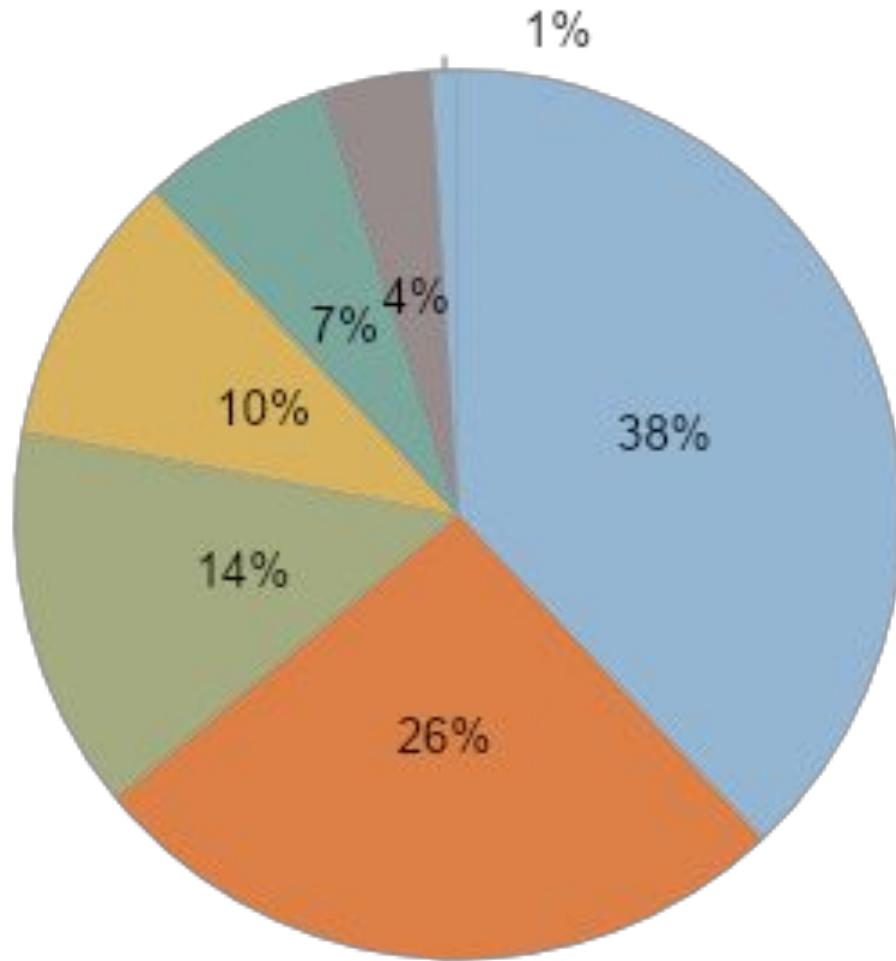

As a result of the Conquest, the English language changed greatly under the influence of the French language. Two languages formed one rich English language which already in the 14th century was used both in speech and in writing.
