Why flood and why now?

The market for flood is a hot topic across the United States, for a variety of reasons, and will likely get even hotter, as time progresses. One such topic is what agent's do with their client's moving forward? Agent's are torn between sticking with their familiar NFIP program's that have been in existence and provided a backstop for their customer's over the past 30 years, or look to the private market that has seen significant signs of development over the past few years.

What's the Latest on NFIP?

As we approach the 50 year anniversary of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, we look into it's costs, it's benefits, and the future of the flood market inside the United States. The forecast deficit published by the Congressional Budget Office in September 2017, estimates an $1.4B annual shortfall for the NFIP program and emphasizes the well known fiscal dilemma the NFIP seems to confront annually. Over the past 5 years, there have been legislative attempts to reform the program. The Briggert Waters
