Lara and the mountain lion

How about becoming the news reporters for 30 seconds?

Lara is my mother's best friend. She's a vet, that's a doctor who looks after sick animals. I want to be a vet too. One day I asked her, 'Why did you decide to be a vet, Lara?'

'It's a strange story,' she answered. 'When I was your age, I had no brothers or sisters to play with, so in the winter holidays I stayed with my three cousins who lived high up in the mountains. They were tall and strong and could ski very fast. They were very good at climbing too. But I couldn't ski or climb. My legs weren't strong enough! I was often ill too, so I had to carry different medicines with me all the time.'

‘One day, my cousins wanted to climb the mountain that was behind their house. They said, “You must come with us, Lara!” They were unkind. They knew I wasn’t well enough or brave enough.

‘I walked a little way, but I was soon tired, so I had to stop and sit down. My cousins laughed at my red face. “See you later, then!” they called and went on up the mountain without me.

‘I started to feel better after a few minutes, but then I heard an animal behind me. I felt a big, warm, furry, soft face on my shoulder. It was a mountain lion.’

‘Wow!’ I said.

‘I was very afraid,’ Lara said, ‘but I couldn’t run away because my legs still felt weak, so I just sat there. The lion opened its mouth—’

‘Oh no!’ I said.

‘—and said, “I’ve got a terrible toothache.” Well, I knew all about toothache because I often had that, so I gave it some medicine that was in my jacket pocket,’ Lara said.

I laughed and said, ‘I don’t believe you, Lara!’

‘Why not?’ she asked. ‘Strange things happen in the world all the time!’
