It is often difficult to meet Mexicans in Moscow, because the flight takes 15 hours and not many can travel

One journalist visited Mexico and asked residents what they know about Russia, mostly people remembered Lenin, red square and eternal winter

A group of Mexican fans wearing green jerseys are celebrating outdoors. One man in the center is playing an acoustic guitar and singing. To his left, a woman wears a large sombrero with 'MEXICO' written on it. Other fans in the background are cheering and holding flags. The scene is set against a backdrop of trees and a clear sky.

One of the main events of 2018 was the World Cup. Huge number of Mexicans visited Russia

The image is a composite. The background features the Spasskaya Tower of the Moscow Kremlin, a red-brick structure with a clock face, under a clear sky. In the foreground, several people are dressed in elaborate Mexican Day of the Dead costumes. These costumes include white lace dresses with red ribbons, large black hats, and face paint that resembles skulls. A Mexican flag is visible in the upper left. On the right, a man in a light blue shirt and sunglasses is taking a photo with his phone, and another person is partially visible next to him.

Mexicans like the cultural heritage of the Soviet Union. The most visited are Red Square and Lenin mausoleum.
