

A wide-angle photograph of St. Basil's Cathedral in Moscow, Russia, taken during the 'golden hour' of late afternoon. The cathedral's multiple onion-shaped domes are painted in vibrant colors like green, blue, red, and gold, and are topped with golden crosses. The main tower is the tallest, with a large golden dome. The building is surrounded by a cobblestone square, and a few people can be seen walking in the distance. To the left, a long, light-colored building with many windows is visible. The sky is filled with large, dramatic clouds, some of which are illuminated by the low sun, creating a warm, golden glow. The overall scene is a classic representation of Russian Orthodox architecture.
